Iraq costs US $12B a month

The flow of blood may be ebbing, but the flood of money into the Iraq war is steadily rising, new analyses show. In 2008, its sixth year, the war will cost approximately $12 billion a month, triple the "burn" rate of its earliest years, Nobel Prize-winning economist Joseph E. Stiglitz and co-author Linda J. Bilmes report in a new book.

Victor Pangelinan used to buy a 50-lbs sack of rice for $21.99. These days, he buys it for $23.99—a hefty $2 increase in just a month's time.

He suspects the high cost of fuel as the culprit that's forcing stores and wholesalers to raise their prices.

"This is all a ripple effect and it's all very scary," said Pangelinan. "We don't know when all this is going to stop because everything is factored around the cost of fuel and it looks like it's about to go up again. So I'm not

Fitia! Japanese media not crazy but aggressive

By FERDIE DE LA TORRE
ferdie_delatorre@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

Gov. Benigno R. Fitia! said he finds the visiting Japanese media covering the extradition case against Kazuyoshi Miura not "crazy" but merely concerned and aggressive.

At the governor's barbecue party for the Japanese media, held at a pavilion in front of Ada Gym in Susupe Wednesday night, a Japanese TV reporter asked Fitia! if he finds the Japanese reporters "crazy" due to the manner with which they have been gathering news in the Miura case.

"No, no, no! I don't find you crazy. That's not the right word to use," replied the governor, eliciting laughter from the media. "I find you to be very, very concerned. And also aggressive. And I respect [that] because I, too, I am very aggressive," the governor told the smiling reporter.

At the start of the party, Fitia! expressed surprise that only about 30 Japanese reporters, photographers, and cameramen were there.

The governor emphasized that the party was strictly social, cultural and has no political overtone.

"I just want to clarify one thing. Tonight's function is not official. It's social," Fitia! stressed.

He said he had asked press secretary Charles Reyes Jr. on Wednesday morning to give the media the signed copy of the governor's arrest warrant for Miura's extradition.

Signing the warrant that morning, the chief executive said, allowed the media to get his decision earlier that day so they can communicate that to their country or to their offices.

"I want to explain the reason why I signed the warrant this morning because I received a lot of concerns from the media that it is not timely for me to sign the warrant because I had originally decided that I will be signing it this evening," he said. "But I guess I was just so happy to be with you, all of you. I wanted to sign this so all of you will be here."

He said he should have stuck to his original decision to sign the warrant that night because that will guarantee that every single one of the media will be at the party.

"So I was right. But never mind me being right. It was the right thing to do for me to sign the warrant this morning. I am somewhat disappointed that my media friends are not here, only few of you are here. But I am very, very happy that some of you are here," he said.

"I want all of you to take a moment out of your very busy time to enjoy Saipan with the governor and my staff together," he added.

A male Japanese reporter asked what was the purpose of the party and the food and whether it's cultural.

"You are correct. This is cultural. As the governor, as the head of this country, I am very, very thankful for your contribution. And this is cultural. Whenever somebody treats me good or gives me something good, I always reciprocate. This is strictly cultural," Fitia! replied.

There were a lot of local food served at the party but only a few Japanese media members ate. Most of the reporters and crew of TV stations immediately left after the governor's interview.

Those who stayed were mostly from the print media. They tried the local food and chatted with the governor for a couple of hours.

"What some of us did was very rude. It is embarrassing. The party was purely cultural and social thing. And the governor was very clear on that from the start," one visiting reporter told Saipan Tribune.

He said some reporters are very much concerned about media ethics, that's why they did not eat.

"But this is Saipan! We should respect their culture, too," he added.

One member of a TV crew said he will apologize to the governor on behalf of their staff.

'No wholesale Cabinet shakeup'

By MARK RABAGO
mark_rabago@saipantribune.com
ASSISTANT EDITOR

The Fitia! administration is not mulling any wholesale changes to the Cabinet, on the heels of former congressman Clyde K. Norita's appointment as the new Commissioner for the Department of Public Safety.

Gov. Benigno R. Fitia!'s press secretary Charles P. Reyes said he sees only the Department of Community and Cultural Affairs post that needs to be filled after former DCCA Secretary Daisy Bier Villagomez opted to go back to the Northern Marianas College.

"I do not expect many changes. I believe only a few other changes may be made, if any. We do have a vacancy for DCCA Secretary, which we wish to fill in the near future. The vacancy was created when Daisy Bier Villagomez [former DCCA Secretary] resumed her employment with NMC last year," he said.

Reyes said Villagomez's former deputy, Melvin Faisao, is now serving in an acting capacity over at DCCA and will do so until an appointment is made with Senate confirmation.

"We will make announcements after a decision is made and communicated to a new appointee willing to serve," he said.

In a statement announcing

Norita's appointment as DPS chief, Fitia! did not specify any reason why Norita's predecessor Rebecca Warfield was being replaced, nor did it mention Warfield's name in the statement.

Aside from Norita's appointment to the DPS post, the Fitia! administration late Tuesday night also named Diego Songsong as the new Secretary of the Department of Public Works.

Norita previously served as the executive director of the Commonwealth Ports Authority and he was also elected to the 14th CNMI Legislature.

He also served as an acting Deputy Commissioner for the Department of Public Safety. He rose through the ranks as a career law enforcement professional, going from police officer I to the rank of major. Norita attended numerous professional development conferences and law enforcement training sessions throughout his 20-year career at DPS.

Songsong, meanwhile, had been serving as deputy DPW Secretary prior to replacing Jose Demapan, who had resigned. Reyes said the Fitia! administration is relying on DPW to process federal capital improvement projects in a timely and responsible manner.

Both Norita and Songsong will serve in acting capacities until confirmed by the Senate.

IRAQ

the Iraq and Afghan wars, including long-term U.S. military occupations of those countries, will cost the U.S. budget between $1.7 trillion and $2.7 trillion - or more - by 2017.

Interest on money borrowed to pay those costs could alone add $816 billion to that bottom line, they say.

The nonpartisan Congressional Budget Office (CBO) has done its own projections and comes in lower, forecasting a cumulative cost by 2017 of $1.2 trillion to $1.7 trillion for the two wars, with Iraq generally accounting for three-quarters of the costs.

Variations in such estimates stem from the sliding scales of assumptions, scenarios and budget items that are counted. But whatever the estimate, the cost will be huge, the auditors of the Government Accountability Office say.

In a Jan. 30 report to Congress, the GAO observed that the U.S. will be committing "significant" future resources to the wars, "requiring decision makers to consider difficult trade-offs as the nation faces an increasing long-range fiscal challenge."

These numbers don't include the war's cost to the rest of the world. In Iraq itself, the 2003 U.S.-led invasion - with its devastating air bombardments - and the looting and arson that followed, severely damaged electricity and other utilities, the oil industry, countless factories, hospitals, schools and other underpinnings of an economy.

No one has tried to calculate the economic damage done to Iraq, said spokesman Niels Buenemann of the International Monetary Fund, which closely tracks national economies. But millions of Iraqis have been left without jobs, and hundreds of thousands of professionals, managers and other middle-class citizens have fled the country.

In their book, "The Three Trillion Dollar War," Stiglitz, of Columbia University, and Bilmes, of Harvard, report the two wars will have cost the U.S. budget $845 billion in 2007 dollars by next Sept. 30, end of fiscal year 2008, assuming Congress fully funds Bush administration requests. That counts not just military operations, but embassy costs, reconstruction and other war-related expenses.

That total far surpasses the $670 billion in 2007 dollars the Congressional Research Service says was the U.S. price tag for the 12-year Vietnam War.

Although American military and Iraqi civilian casualties have declined in recent months, the rate of spending has shot up. A fully funded 2008 war budget will be 155 percent higher than 2004's, the CBO reports.

The reasons are numerous: the "surge" of additional U.S. units into Iraq; rising fuel costs; fattened bonuses to attract re-enlistments; and particularly the need to "reset," that is, repair or replace worn-out, destroyed or damaged military equipment. Almost $17 billion is appropriated this year for advanced armored vehicles to protect troops against roadside bombs.

Looking ahead, both the CBO and Stiglitz-Bilmes construct two scenarios, one in which U.S. troop levels in Iraq and Afghanistan drop sharply and early - to 30,000 by late 2009 for the CBO, and to 55,000 by 2012 for Stiglitz-Bilmes - and a second in which the drawdown is more gradual.

Significantly, the two studies view different time frames, the CBO calculating possible costs met in the next 10 years, while Stiglitz and Bilmes also include costs incurred during that period but paid for later, such as equipment replaced in post-2017 budgets.

This factor figures most in the category of veterans' medical care and disability payments, where the CBO foresees $9 billion to $13 billion in costs by 2017. Stiglitz and Bilmes, meanwhile, project $422 billion to $717 billion in costs over the lifetime of soldiers who by 2017 are wounded or otherwise mentally or physically disabled by the wars.

"The CBO is only looking 10 years out on everything," Bilmes noted in an interview.

For its part, a CBO critique suggested that Bilmes and Stiglitz might be overstating the expense of treating veterans' brain injuries, a costly category.

The two economists say their calculations are conservative, because they don't encompass many "hidden" items in the U.S. budget. Their basic projections also exclude the potentially huge debt-service cost - on which CBO approximately agrees - and the cost to the U.S. economy of global oil prices that have quadrupled since 2003, an increase analysts blame partly on the Iraq upheaval.

MIURA

the office of Superior Court associate judge Ramona V. Manglona where they had a chamber conference.

Hanson told the media that they and the prosecution agreed that the next hearing would remain on Wednesday at 1:30pm.

The judge called the lawyers to a conference to discuss the hearing schedule, now that Gov. Benigno R. Fitial had issued the arrest warrant for the extradition of the 60-year-old Miura.

"What we have agreed to with the court and with the prosecution is to have Mr. Miura come in for an initial appearance under this new warrant. And what we've agreed is that it will remain next Wednesday, the 19th, which was the date that was scheduled for status conference on the fugitive warrant," Hanson said.

Instead of a status conference, the hearing will be turned into an initial appearance on the governor's warrant, he added.

"So there won't be any hearings between now and next Wednesday at 1:30pm," he said.

In the meantime, Hanson said what he and co-counsels Fitzgerald and Bruce Berline would do is to go over the governor's warrant with Miura.

The lawyer said the extradition package is about 40 pages and contains a lot of documents.

"We want to make sure that he [Miura] understands everything in the governor's warrant," he said.

Hanson said that, on Wednesday, Judge Manglona is expected to advise Miura of his right to legal counsel and basically tell him about the procedures.

On that day a briefing schedule and a hearing for Miura's petition for writ of habeas corpus may be set out.

"There will be a deadline for us to file a writ and we are asking for a couple of weeks depending upon everybody's schedule. So she [Manglona] may say, 'Okay, within two or three weeks of next Wednesday, you have to file your petition for writ of habeas corpus,'" Hanson said.

The lawyer said the prosecution will then have an opportunity to respond, Miura will reply, and there will be a hearing.

"This whole process could take a month. It could take two months because of the busy schedule of everybody," he said.

In the meantime, Hanson said, the proceedings in California will continue.

"Anytime before we go in on our hearing for a writ, something could happen in California. They could quash the warrant, which would make the basis for all of this to go away," he said.

If California quashes the warrant, Hanson said, California Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger will most likely recall his request for extradition, Gov. Fitial will recall his warrant for extradition, and the court will then dismiss the case.

With respect to Miura's legal fight in Los Angeles, Hanson said their co-counsel, Mark J. Geragos, has not filed a motion yet because they were still finalizing an affidavit in Japan.

Hanson said this affidavit is very important to support Miura's contention of double jeopardy in California and also the habeas corpus petition on Saipan.

"But first and foremost, it will support the motion to quash the warrant on double jeopardy grounds in California court," he said.

Once the affidavit is finalized, which, according to Hanson, would likely be yesterday, it will be sent to Geragos.

On talks that some enterprising people are selling T-shirts on the island to support Miura's double jeopardy position, the lawyer said he heard about it, but that their legal team has nothing to do with it.

EX-COLLEGE

Fernandez. I'm optimistic with the administrative team that she assembled and today I was very pleased with some of the expression of support from the members of the Senate and the House," said Hess in an interview immediately after the briefing.

He said the CMI and NMC cases are quite alike in that both have significant facility needs, with some relating to health and safety.

"But more importantly, they were related to educational quality and the ability to deliver programs well. And that requires a significant commitment on the part of the government and all the friends and supporters of the Northern Marianas College," said Hess.

However, unlike NMC, the Marshall Islands college went through three cycles of show-cause, unlike NMC, which only has one chance to get out of show-cause.

"[Unfortunately] the accreditation has changed and that's no longer possible. There's only one cycle of show-cause so NMC doesn't get a second chance at show-cause and they have to make it right the first time," he said.

The former president of the CMI said it would now be up to the government and the community to help NMC get out of show-cause in half a year's time.

"The advice is in many ways complicated but the most important thing is everyone in the community—the public, the government—understand the urgency of this particular action by the accrediting agency.

"The future of the college is in the balance and a positive response will lead to a bright new future for Northern Marianas College, but there's no tomorrow if a positive response does not come forward in the next six to nine months," said Hess.

Fernandez said she is very thankful and honored for the assistance Hess has extended to NMC.

"We will be working closely with him on this process. As you know, he's a highly respected expert in the field. He's a retired president. He is credited for taking a college out of accreditation and regaining accreditation. And, of course, he was brought to the CMI to turn the college around and, in fact, he brought the college out of show-cause and the CPI is now in warning," she said.

Fernandez earlier appealed to lawmakers to fast-track legislation that would help NMC fix its accreditation woes.

"We can do it. NMC can do it. We just don't have the time. So we need to mobilize help... This is part of the reason why Dr. Hess is working with us because hopefully by this afternoon, or before he leaves, we'll have the action plan as to how we can make this all happen within a very, very limited time," she said.

Fernandez was especially concerned about the short amount of time left for NMC to save itself from being unaccredited.

"We have only have six months to provide evidence that we resolved all of these concerns and, as he [Hess] mentioned with regards to the new facility, we have to give them a funding plan that's solid before October. So, all of these needs are absolutely right now," she said.

Senate Vice President Felix T. Mendiola told Fernandez that he and his colleagues are willing to help.

"I pledge myself, and I'm sure it's shared by my colleagues, I'm here for you. I'm thankful that we met today because I believe education is our future. We can't set this aside in anyway. I'm willing to work with Rep. [David] Apatang and everyone else to make this happen," he said.

Mendiola said that NMC should go back the Legislature once they computed the money they need to be able gain full accreditation.

"What we really need to do now is for NMC to give us the ballpark figure, how much are we talking about. Huddle up as well, with a representative from you, and work together for the needed resolution at the soonest possible time."

RICE

worried. I'm beyond worried; now I'm just scared."

Stores on the island have reported that their prices of rice have gone up or are expected to go up by at least $2 due to the increase in wholesale prices.

San Jose Mart store manager Ik Yoon said the store used to sell its 50-lbs bag of Calrose rice for $19.99 each. It was not until last month that the store was forced to raise its price to $21.99.

He explained that because the price of rice is constantly going up, customers resort to buying much smaller sacks as opposed to the bigger 50-pounder.

"I don't blame them. Salaries are low but the price of commodities keep on going up. How can we even save money?" Yoon asked.

Han Nam Market, which used to sell 50-lbs Golden Phoenix rice for $19.95 each, had also raised its price to $23.95 early last month.

Store manager Mr. Ju said they've just received another notice from their wholesaler informing them that the price of rice will once again increase in its upcoming shipment.

"So it's better if you buy rice now because the price will rise again this coming container," Ju said.

The store's wholesalers include Pacific Grocers, Kesy International Trading, and Luen Fung.

Kagman Market also reported that they too had just received a notice from their wholesaler, Kesy International Trading, on Wednesday that the price of rice will increase in its next shipment.

The store said the new wholesale price will be at $24.50 each, which means the retail price will even be higher.

Kagman Market used to sell its 50-lbs Royal Umbrella Jasmine rice at $20.99 each. Just earlier last month, it was forced to raise its price to $23.99 each.

Payless Supermarket's 50-lbs Calrose Diamond G was earlier sold for $18.95. Last month the price rose to $21.00 each.

Carmen Safeway store manager Eli Maravilla explained that every time the shipping companies raise their fuel surcharge cost, the prices of commodities goes up as well.

"Wholesalers initiate the price increase when they get their shipments," Maravilla said.

Alpex Wholesale agrees that fuel surcharge is the main culprit of the price increase.

"Since last year, it has been going up almost every other month. Freight cost, just last year, was $3,600; now it is at least $4,000 per shipment," Alpex said.

The wholesaler added that the price increase covers the cost of fuel surcharge and labor cost for the rice production companies.

Yaong Corporation said that it's the shortage of rice from suppliers that forces them to raise their prices.

According to recent Asian Business news, the causes of the shortages and high prices of rice are diverse, and vary from country to country.

They include natural disasters or adverse weather; high fuel prices, which add to transport costs; hoarding and smuggling of rice and wheat to take advantage of higher prices across national borders; and, in some countries, a shortage of electricity that is reportedly hampering mills from functioning at full capacity.

Resident Robert Travilla sees a bright side to the price increase.

"The price will totally scare off the people from buying them. But you know, it's about time that everybody starts going on a diet," he said.

TO ADDRESS SPIKE IN ROBBERY, BURGLARY CASES

Patrol, criminal investigation to be strengthened

By FERDIE DE LA TORRE
ferdie_deltorre@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

Newly-appointed Department of Public Safety Commissioner Claudio Norita said his administration will strengthen patrol and investigations sections to address the increasing number of robbery and burglary cases on the island.

In an interview with Saipan

Tribune, Norita said the patrol section and the criminal investigation bureau are the backbones of DPS, so that is where he is going to invest resources, manpower, and funding.

"We can get federal grants into these key units because these are the ones that have a direct impact on the community," he said.

Norita said patrol officers respond to crimes, they make the report, and their report goes to the criminal investigation bureau.

"We have a criminal investigation unit that handles 300 or 400 burglary in a year and there's like only one or two guys handling it. That's an overwhelming load!" the commissioner said.

He said they are now thinking of ways on how to approach the case overload problem.

"We need to look at the ones that are priority and address them in resources.

Augmenting is one of them but is not the only solution. There has to be a dedicated approach, a systematic approach to how we do this," Norita said.

Aqua Resort Club restaurant manager Peter De Loyola poses with the king-sized eggs that children will decorate in the egg-decorating contest of the hotel's Easter Sunday Brunch set for March 23.

ARC to celebrate Easter with egg hunt, decorating contest

By MARK RABAGO

Aqua Resort Club will have an "egg-citing" Easter celebration on March 23, as the Achugao hotel will have an egg hunt and an egg-decorating contest at its Costa Terrace Restaurant.

Restaurant manager Peter De Loyola said the hotel's Easter Sunday Brunch will feature the twin events, with the egg hunt commencing at 12:30pm.

The event will have two age groups—toddler division (5 years old and under) and children division (6-12 years old). De Loyola said winners will take home prizes from Aqua Resort and its generous sponsors.

The egg-decorating contest, meanwhile, has already begun as children who dined the past two Sundays—March 2 and 9—have already picked up their special king-sized eggs to decorate as they please.

"Those who want to join the egg-decorating contest can bring it home and bring it back on the 23rd of March," said De Loyola.

He said other interested children only have to dine this Sunday, March 16, to be included in the egg-decorating contest, which is limited to the first 15 participants.

First prize in the egg-decorating contest is an overnight stay and one month free use of Aqua Resort's swimming pool. Second place gets a Light and Easy Lunch Buffet for two and one month free use of the swimming pool, while the third place prize is one month free use of the swimming pool.

The Easter Sunday Brunch at Aqua Resort Club will be from 11am to 2pm and costs $25 for adults and $12.50 for children.

Aqua Resort F&B sales manager Yoshimi Yanigasawa is inviting children and their parents to dine at the hotel this Easter Sunday.

"It's a fun place to be during Easter Sunday. So come all and enjoy," she said.

For more information about Aqua Resort's Easter Sunday Brunch and the egg hunt and egg-decorating contest, call 322-1234 and ask to be connected to the food and beverage department.

NMC could lose its E.Ed program if...

By RIANNE PANGELINAN-BROWN

REPORTER

The Northern Marianas College said it would likely lose its Bachelor of Science in Elementary Education degree program if the college's accreditation is terminated.

NMC president Carmen Fernandez explained that the accreditation of the college's Bachelor of Science in Elementary Education is dependent on the underlying institutional accreditation from the Accrediting Commission for Community and Junior Colleges.

"As such, the accreditation of the School of Education will likely discontinue if the ACCJC accreditation is terminated," Fernandez said.

In a letter to Fernandez, the Western Association of Schools and Colleges stated that they have approved re-accreditation of the college's four-year degree program in elementary school education, based on the report submitted by an Accrediting Commission for Senior Colleges and Universities member that was part of a team that visited the college.

The continued accreditation of NMC's four-year degree program for elementary school education was based on a series of accomplishments that the NMC School of Education has achieved.

The WASC letter also stated that in order for NMC to retain its accreditation from the ACS-CU for the bachelor's program, it will need to address "satisfactorily issues cited by the ACCJC and into compliance with ACCJC standards."

"We are focusing our efforts on overcoming the show-cause status, and as the letter from the senior commission indicates, NMC is making great strides toward reaching this goal," Fernandez said.

IMPORTANT INFORMATION ABOUT YOUR DRINKING WATER

February 2008 Tests Showed Coliform Bacteria in Saipan Water

Our water system recently violated a drinking water standard. Although this incident was not an emergency, as our customers, you have a right to know what happened and what we did to correct this situation.

We routinely monitor for drinking water contaminants. Throughout February 2008, we collected 124 water samples in Saipan to test for the presence of coliform bacteria. Of the 124 water tests, eighteen samples or 14.52% showed the presence of total coliform bacteria. The standard is that no more than five percent (5%) of samples may do so.

What should I do?

- You do not need to boil your water or take other corrective actions. However, if you have specific health concerns, consult your doctor.
- People with severely compromised immune systems, infants, and some elderly may be at increased risk. These people should seek advice about drinking water from their health care providers. General guidelines on ways to lessen the risk of infection by microbes are available from the U. S. Environmental Protection Agency's (EPA) Safe Drinking Water Hotline at 1 (800) 426-4791.

What does this mean?

This is not an emergency. If it had been, you would have been notified immediately. Coliform bacteria are generally not harmful themselves. Coliforms are bacteria which are naturally present in the environment and are used as an indicator that other, potentially-harmful, bacteria may be present. Coliforms were found in more samples than allowed and this was a warning of potential problems.

Usually, coliforms are a sign that there could be a problem with the system's treatment or distribution system (pipelines). Whenever we detect coliform bacteria in any sample, we do follow-up testing to see if other bacteria of greater concern, such as fecal coliform or E. coli, are present. We did find these bacteria in our subsequent testing, and further testing shows that this problem has been resolved.

What happened? What was done? Look below for the specific village or streets where problems occurred in February 2008:

- Koblerville (As Gonno Rd., Potu Ct., Tinaktak Dr., Magisa Dr., Buchibuchi Dr.) The chlorine equipment malfunctioned during power outages. The repairs are now complete and treatment resumed.
- Obyan (Ladder Beach Ln., Naftan Rd., Flame Tree Rd., Obyan Beach Dr.) Treatment point was relocated back to original site after Water Task Force (WTF) Well Rehabilitation project was completed.
- Susupe (Texas Rd., Tekken St., Beach Rd., Chalan Hagoi) Ran out of chlorine cylinders (gas) earlier than anticipated. Treatment operators immediately replaced empty with a full chlorine cylinder. Chlorine treatment increased for disinfection process.
- Chalan Laulau: Ran out of chlorine cylinders (gas) earlier than anticipated. Treatment operators immediately replaced empty with a full chlorine cylinder. Chlorine treatment increased for disinfection process.
- Dandan (Tanduki Dr.) Treatment operators discovered the chlorine ejector for this water supply malfunctioned. Operators replaced the damaged chlorine ejector, set pumping rate and treatment resumed.
- Upper MIHA Housing (Sugar King Rd., Chalan Pale Arnold, Navy Hill Rd.) Tests indicate that there was proper chlorine levels in the water system, however, since the water system is in a non 24-hour area, the chlorine treatment did not have enough mixing or contact time in the distribution system. Chlorine treatment increased for disinfection process.
- Sadog Tasi (Sadog Tasi Dr., Pila Dr.) Tests indicate that generally there was proper chlorine levels in the water system, however, the chlorine treatment did not have enough mixing or contact time in the distribution system. Chlorine treatment increased for disinfection process.
- Agag (Santa Lourdes Rd.) Treatment operators discovered that the automatic switchover mechanism had failed and that the chlorine treatment to the Agag Reservoir had been interrupted. The pumping rate was reset and treatment resumed.

AGO says autopsy not needed on nun who drowned

By FERDIE DE LA TORRE

REPORTER

There will be no autopsy needed on the 62-year-old Vietnamese nun who drowned at the beach in Chalan Kanoa Sunday night.

Department of Public Safety spokesperson Lei Ogumoro said yesterday that, according to the Attorney General's Office, an autopsy will not be conducted on Sr. Myriam Phan.

Ogumoro said further police investigation showed that Phan and a friend arrived at the Aquarius Beach Tower beach site at 5:30pm and went swimming.

Ogumoro said that between 6pm to 6:30pm, the victim's friend returned to shore where she waited for Phan.

When Phan did not return, the friend tried to locate her. The friend asked for help from several individuals, but they were unsuccessful. The police were then called.

Police received a report about an overdue swimmer at the beach site located behind Aquarius.

DPS Boating Safety Unit officers, and officers from DPS Fire Division Search and Rescue Unit and Patrol Unit immediately responded to the site. A U.S. Coast Guard Hilo chopper also assisted.

After hours of searching or at 12:30am Monday, the chopper located the victim in the ocean between Saipan and Tinian.

Phan, of the Sisters of Good Shepherd, was pronounced dead at the Commonwealth Health Center Monday at 3:55am.

KHS now offers electronics course

By RIANNE PANGELINAN-BROWN
Rianne_pangelinan@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

The Kagman High School has developed a new elective in its existing courses that would allow its students to explore careers in the electronics and engineering field.

Through the initiative of Kagman High principal Alfred Ada, the first basic electronics course is now being offered to provide students practical knowledge in the field of electronics and help them decide whether or not to pursue engineering related careers.

Ada said it is part of his vision to provide other classes for the KHS students to explore.

He was only recently allowed to make it happen as the biggest drawback was the funds needed to get the program started and to find a teacher who will teach the course.

Ada said that during a class observation, he discovered that one substitute teacher for mathematics was incorporating "a lot of engineering and electronics into the subject."

Benjie Ladrangan now teaches the electronics course.

"He has vast knowledge in engineering and electronics. I know he's the right person to teach this class," said Ada.

The school was recently allowed to use $8,000 in vocational funds for the new course. The voc-ed funds allowed KHS to purchase consumable funds.

There are currently 18 students enrolled in the elective course. A club was also formed so that students not taking the course may take part in whatever activities the engineering course has in store for its students.

Out of the 18 students in the course, there is only one female who has showed interest in engineering.

Sixteen-year-old Ashley Fujihira runs the engineering club as its classroom president.

The course teaches the fundamentals of electronics as it applies to everyday life. Students learn to read circuit diagrams, convert alternating current to direct current, assemble an AM radio, build and use a multi-tester, learn how to solder printed circuit board, among other skills.

Ada said he is proud that the school was able to push through with this effort to create an elective that the students can take seriously and "just have fun with it."

The CNMI has been under tremendous pressure to provide vocational training to its resident workers so they could lessen their dependence on alien workers, who are the ones mostly doing these types of jobs.

Flashback

A LOOK BACK AT PAST YEARS' HEADLINES

MARCH 14, 2000

High oil prices seen to drive cost of basic goods up

Although increasing prices of petroleum products remain confined to gas pumps, airline tickets and transportation costs, their effects will soon translate to further contraction of the CNMI economy in terms of higher commodity prices. Northern Marianas distributors of items imported from the mainland United States and other countries are starting to feel the pinch of skyrocketing oil prices, reporting a sharp increase in the cost of moving the commodities from off and within the island.

Appointment power faces legal challenge

A major legal battle is brewing between the Senate and the executive branch over the extent of the legislative authority to confirm appointments made by the governor, ranging from members of boards and commissions as well as departments heads. Senators have authorized their legal counsel Steve Woodruff to represent the upper house in any legal actions seeking determination of the constitutionality of its advice and consent authority granted by law as well as the extent and limits of the governor's appointment power.

User fee collection shrinks

In what appears to be a validation of the projected drop in apparel production due to the billion-dollar class action suit against garment manufacturers and buyers, the CNMI government reported a sharp decline in user fee collection last year. A report from the Department of Finance disclosed that user fee collection from garment export certification fell to $9.7 million during the third quarter of the Fiscal Year 1999 compared with $11.5 million in previous year.

Lights off at Tinian Airport

Has the Commonwealth Utilities Corporation gone berserk? The corporation's recent disconnection sprees have included Tinian International Airport which placed safety of air transport passengers in peril, according to Ports Authority Board Chair Roman S. Palacios. Mr. Palacios said CUC's action could have resulted in a major air disaster had the airport's stand-by generators failed to promptly kick-on.

Workers' ordeal in paradise

When Mang Pedro decided to leave the Philippines to work on Saipan in the early 1980s, he carried strong hopes to one day realize his dream of comfortable life - for himself and for the family he would have. Mang Pedro - not his real name - landed a job at the Sablan Construction Company. Armed with solid determination and the skills he had mastered for years, he slowly earned the management's trust which kept him for almost 21 years.

Excise tax drop 14%

Excise tax collected by the Customs Division totaled a paltry $4.8 million last month, representing a 14 percent decline from January's $5.6 million. However, the agency was quick to point out that the $800,000 shortfall was due to the 28-day calendar of February than anything else.

It is cyanide or not?

As government agencies pool efforts to prevent a chemical spill due to deteriorating storage containers at Marpi and Lower Base, the closure of the Marpi radar site has led to speculations as to what these chemicals might be. Efforts made by the Saipan Tribune to find out what chemicals may be contained in the deteriorating storage containers were in vain, as officials after officials denied knowledge of what these chemicals are.

NMI's own Disneyland?

Imagine an amusement-cultural complex in the perimeters of the American Memorial Park in the likes of Disneyland, complete with a man-made lake in the center and an underwater aquarium comparable to that of Guam and Hawaii. Now imagine separate but integrated facilities and buildings surrounding that man-made lake, such as a museum-learning center, replicas of Chamorro, Carolinian, and Micronesian villages, a performing arts-cum-convention center, and a coral reef center.

Atalig: Don't use Rota DPW as a scapegoat

REPORTER

The Department of Public Works on Rota has expressed disappointment with Rota Municipal Council councilman Vicente M. Calvo's decision to publicize his concerns regarding the Tatachog landfill.

In a letter to Calvo, resident director Martin S. Atalig said that Calvo's decision to air his concerns "in the manner you elected was callous and a blatant insult to my department and staff."

He characterized Calvo's method as "a way to further his political career."

He said: "DPW has consistently kept an open-door policy to all government agencies and is ready and willing to discuss and resolve issues concerning the department's operations."

Calvo had shared with the Saipan Tribune his letter to Rota DPW where he said that the Tatachog dumpsite appears to be "abandoned and neglected."

In that letter, Calvo said the Tatachog dump "used to be manned so that people could be guided where to dump [their trash]. Now that it is unmanned, people dump uncontrollably anywhere around the site, including the secondary access (Old Japanese railroad) road."

Atalig said that the Tatachog dumpsite is neither abandoned nor neglected. He said that despite having "a severe lack of funding for equipment, maintenance, fuel, and personnel, DPW staff has shown exceptional dedication, regularly pushing improperly disposed debris to the proper designated disposal areas."

Atalig said his staff works in the sun and stench of the landfill no less than twice a week. "This is hazardous work and my staff is willing to do what is necessary without the benefit of the hazard pay they deserve," Atalig said.

He added that DPW staff's contribution to the island of Rota should be appreciated and not insulted by an insinuation that the department "is not doing everything in its power to provide for the safety and sanitation" of the island.

Within the past two weeks, Solid Waste Management director Blas P. Mafnas and technical consultant Steve Himey paid a visit to the island to perform a site inspection of the Tatachog landfill.

According to Atalig, the two "were very impressed with how Rota DPW's ground maintenance crew maintained the perimeter."

"Their approval of our continued maintenance of the Rota landfill proves that Rota DPW was not neglecting or abandoning its obligation to provide such maintenance," said Atalig.

He said that Mafnas and Himey are currently working to assist Rota DPW "by finalizing their assessment and recommendations in order to help bring the landfill to full EPA compliance."

Atalig said the department expects Calvo to do his part as a Rota Municipal Council member to help improve the Rota landfill.

"The responsibility of improving the Tatachog landfill does not fall on DPW alone. It is the responsibility of all regulatory, maintenance, and enforcement agencies as well as the general public to promote safe and responsible waste disposal at the Tatachog landfill," said Atalig.

He added that it is "no good to look for scapegoats for the island's problems. ... We must all work together and do our part to find and share resources ... I invite you as a member of the Rota Municipal Council to create solutions instead of problems," Atalig said.

Keep vaccinating

Despite many studies discrediting its views, a vocal group of parents and lobbyists insists that vaccines cause autism, a disorder characterized by impaired social, emotional and communications skills. Those making the argument present heart-wrenching stories before courts and the media in the hope that someone, somewhere, will believe their theories and use them to cure their children. A recent case seems to have added fuel to their fire, but it should not dissuade parents from giving their children life-saving vaccines.

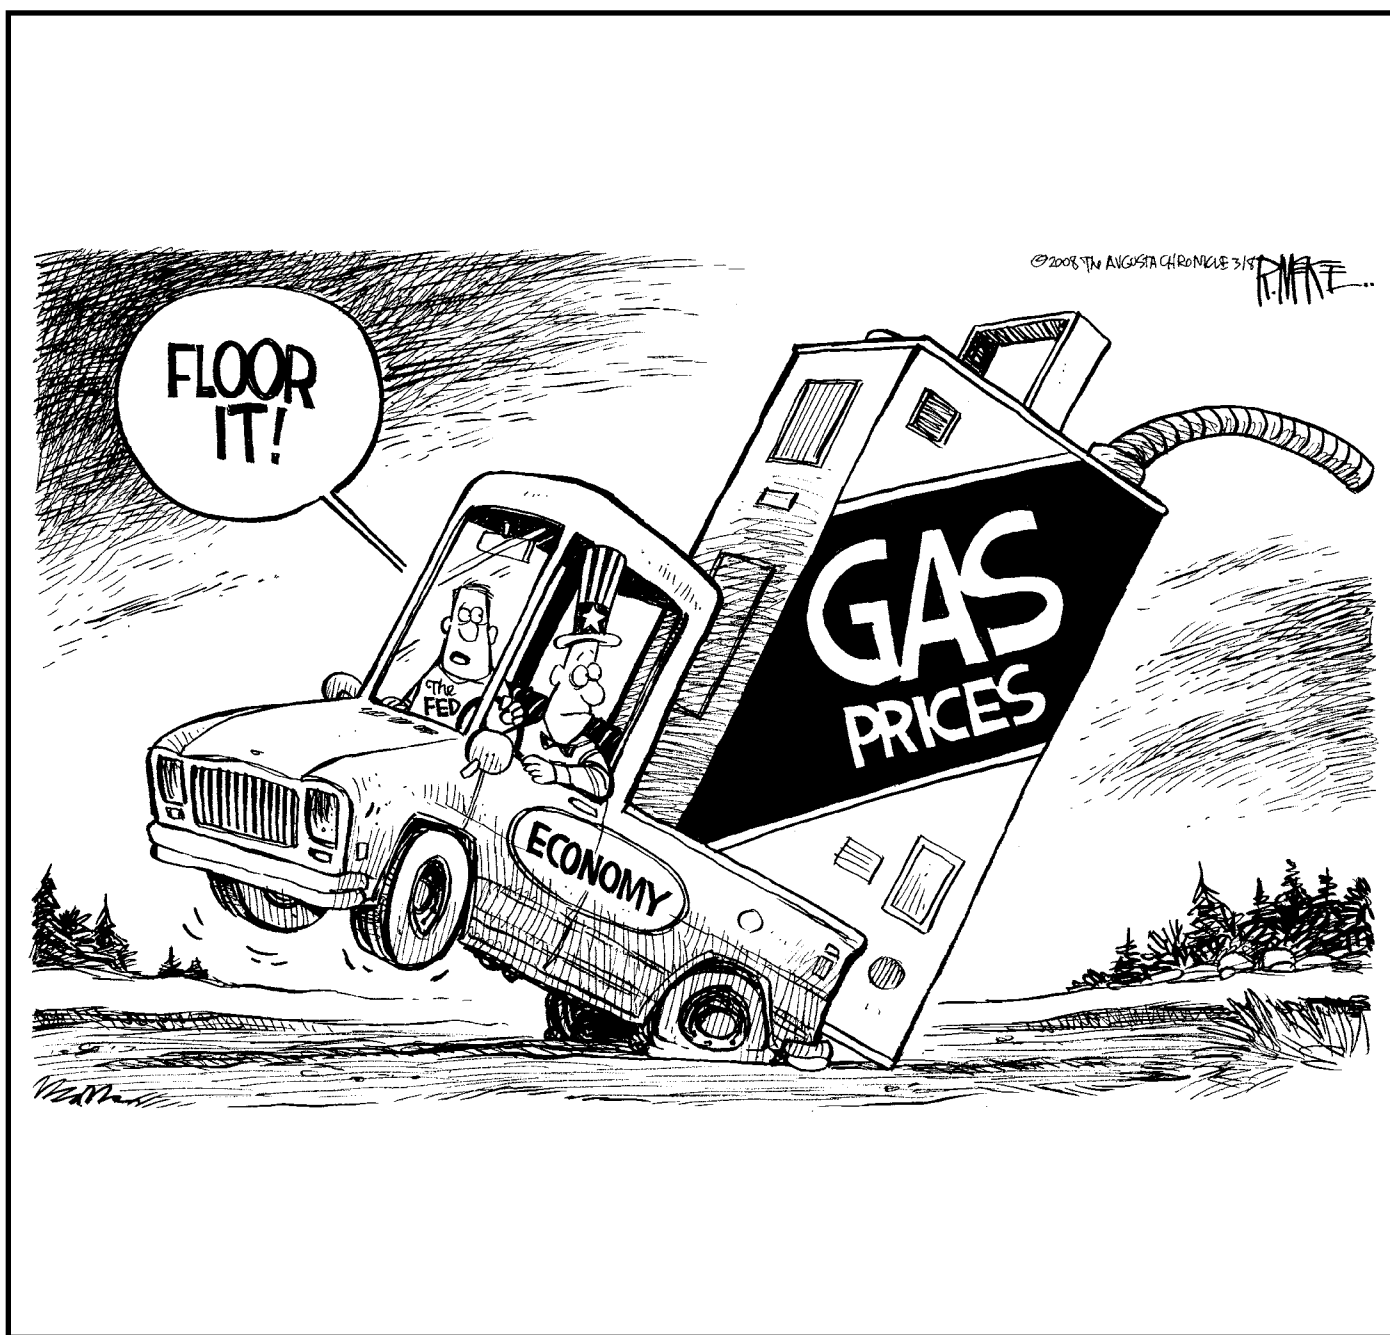

In the case, a 1 1/2-year-old girl suffered a fever and other adverse reactions after receiving vaccine shots. Over the next few months, her brain function regressed, and she developed symptoms of autism spectrum disorder. Government officials have agreed to compensate her family because, they said, the vaccines had aggravated a previously unknown underlying mitochondrial disorder, a rare condition that can deprive the brain of energy.

Anti-vaccine groups have cited the case as evidence that vaccines cause autism, despite public health officials', clinicians' and researchers' emphatic statements otherwise. For over a decade, activists have been arguing that vaccines, and particularly a mercury-containing preservative used in some vaccines, cause autism. This theory is largely promoted because autism symptoms usually appear around the age when children are first immunized. Since 2001, however, no vaccines (except some flu vaccines) routinely recommended for young children have been manufactured with the mercury preservative. Since then, autism rates have not slowed. Rather than abandoning their suspicions, some parents now implicate other aspects of vaccination, such as the simultaneous administering of multiple shots, another practice that researchers say is safe.

The science behind this recent case is tenuous, as there haven't been any studies that clearly prove causation between vaccines and mitochondrial disorders or between mitochondrial disorders and autism. Some researchers argue that the girl's mitochondrial disorder would have been triggered anyway by another stressor such as a common illness or fever, and may have become more severe had she contracted any of the dangerous diseases against which she was vaccinated. These diseases, after all, still afflict American children. Just last month in San Diego, a measles outbreak occurred among unvaccinated children.

Autism is a tragic disorder, but no one knows what causes it or even how to test for it biologically. Given how little is known about autism—and the fact that no science has been able to connect it to vaccines—parents should continue to protect their children against known, preventable risks: the deadly diseases that vaccines keep at bay.

What $5,500 an hour buys

By HAROLD MEYERSON
SPECIAL TO THE WASHINGTON POST

Eliot Spitzer's fall from grace (and from power) raises a host of serious concerns, not least our ongoing and often ludicrous conflation of the personal and the political in matters of morals. But flawed mortal that I am, I confess I keep coming back to one detail as this gloomy tale unfolds: $5,500.

That's what Spitzer and his fellow numbered clients were shelling out per hour if they booked the Emperors Club VIP's top-of-the-line providers.

I've given serious thought to this over the past day, and I'm not sure that I've even had a sexual fantasy that, if actualized, would be worth $5,500 an hour. Of course, fantasies can involve particular, unattainable persons, and an economist might say that if the client has an obsession that only a certain provider could satisfy, that could drive the price way up.

But that doesn't seem to have been the case for Client 9. Of all the details in the transcript of the back-and-forth between Spitzer and the Emperors Club's traffic manager, the one I find most mind-boggling is when Spitzer, just before he hooks up with his hooker, asks to be reminded of what the lady looks like.

He's paying $4,300 for this experience and he needs a refresher on her looks? Four grand and change and he can't remember whether he booked tall or short, blond or brunette? We're not talking obsession here. We're talking positional goods.

Positional goods are those commodities that are more valuable than their run-of-the-mill counterparts because a special status attaches to them, since only a select few can have them. Since the Web sites on which prostitutes advertise indicate that the average hourly rate is around $300, the Emperors Club maximum rate, which is roughly 18 times higher, could be justified by the particular appeals and skills of its hookers. I haven't conducted empirical research on this one, but let me just say: I doubt it.

I suspect that what makes a prostitute worth $5,500 an hour is that she costs $5,500 an hour. The value here doesn't dictate the price. The price, rather, dictates the value. These women are available only to the wealthy; the ability to hire them, like the ability to live on Fifth Avenue overlooking Central Park, means that you've made it. And even if your hour turns out to be a bit disappointing, that's okay, because $5,500 doesn't really mean anything to you—which just means you've REALLY made it.

And there, I suppose, is the thrill. The power of being able to command the world's priciest hooker, like the power of owning the world's priciest real estate, could be a turn-on in itself. The power of dropping thousands and not even remembering what type of woman you've booked: Boy, are you ever something! Whether or not you're getting one terrific woman, the transaction alone confirms that you're one terrific dude.

In fairness, Spitzer clearly thought he was also buying one other valuable commodity: secrecy. At those rates, everyone could be trusted to keep quiet. Spitzer, however, clearly forgot what he'd learned in Prosecutions 101, which is that nothing intrigues a prosecutor more than unexplained silence. Federal investigators told The New York Times that they were looking into the governor's cash withdrawals on the suspicion that he might be paying off a blackmailer. (Of course, after the railroading that the Bush-Rove Justice Department gave to Don Siegelman, the Democratic former governor of Alabama, currently incarcerated for what look to be no more than misdemeanors, no such investigation is itself above suspicion.) Without Spitzer's "cover-up"—which in this instance simply meant paying in cash—the crime, such as it was, would have gone undetected.

Clients 1 through 8 were surely in need of some secrecy, too, if not quite so patently as New York's governor. Men don't usually print their patronage of prostitutes on their business cards. But $5,500 buys a lot more than secrecy, and a lot more than sex. It buys a confirmation of status and power. It has all the positional upside of conspicuous consumption, though it remains—or is supposed to remain—inconspicuous.

There are real tragedies in this case, of course. And, politically, I suppose, the whole affair is one more argument against continuing tax cuts to the rich, even if Spitzer did invest his money here rather than in China.

But I keep coming back to price, even though I know it purchased a positional good. $5,500, huh? I need to work on my fantasies.

Home-grown computer upgrade

If you're as worried about your financial future as most folks in the Commonwealth are, you're likely trying to nurse your old computer along for as long as possible in order to milk every last penny's worth out of it. For those of us who use notebook computers, the financial stakes can get high, since the good ones carry stiff price tags.

My favorite ThinkPad notebook finally hit the capacity wall last week. But it was good timing since, as I brooded over it, I was hefting the external hard drive that I wrote about in my February 29 column.

And then I got inspired. Which, usually, is a dangerous thing. I decided to upgrade my notebook computer hard drive myself.

The hardware angle didn't worry me, but my ThinkPad, like many other brands, has a weird (weird to me, since I'm not a computer expert) hard drive partition that is used for "recovery." So I didn't know if I could replicate my initial hard drive onto the bigger one.

But I aimed to find out. Everything seems to be working well, so for anyone contemplating the same type of project, here's what I did.

1. I went out and bought the new hard drive. How did I know what to get? I Googled my model of computer, and read a web site by a Linux user (those guys are smart) about his hard drive project. I figured he knows what he's doing, so I mimicked him and bought the same model of hard drive.

2. I fished around on the web and found some instructions from the computer manufacturer for hard drive removal and replacement. I printed these out.

3. I backed up all my data, of course.

4. Remember that external hard drive I mentioned? It's a 2.5-inch drive mounted in an enclosure kit, which connects to the computer via a USB cable. I opened up the enclosure, took out its hard drive (onto which I had just backed up my computer), and installed my new hard drive in it.

5. Here was the key step: Using a program called Acronis True Image (version 8.0 in my case, which might be a bit dated), I took an image of my old hard drive, including that wacky partition I mentioned, and copied it onto the new hard drive. This worked out so slick I was totally surprised. In fact, I'm still surprised.

6. Having set it up, I removed the new hard drive from the external enclosure in preparation for its transplant into my computer.

7. Surgery time! Prep the patient: I unplugged my computer and removed the battery.

8. I removed the old hard drive from the computer, taking a zillion digital photos of it along the way, so I wouldn't botch the installation of the new drive.

9. I put in the new drive, and even the instructions and my photos didn't stop me from trying to put it in upside down. I was ginger about things, though, so no harm done.

10. I put the battery back in, plugged in the computer, booted it up, and, presto, all was bliss. Since I used an image, as opposed to a mere copy, of my original disk, all my settings, programs, data, and such were just like usual. Amazing.

Victory. How sweet it is. Beginner's luck? Probably.

But if I can do it, anyone can. I think the big magic here was the Acronis True Image software; I don't know if pros use it (many use a competing product called "Ghost") but, for an amateur like me, it made everything fall into place. Also, having that external 2.5-inch enclosure kit really helped, since it provided a convenient platform to temporarily mount the new drive while I set it up.

When I think about the time I spent, and wasted, constantly culling down and reorganizing files on my old hard drive because it was overflowing, I wish I had done this project a year ago.

Saipan: More of what I like about you

Last week I started this list of common responses I give to people who contact me wondering what it is like to live in Saipan. Here, my list continues.

Self-discovery.

You can do anything. For some reason, Saipan is a place of self-discovery. If you have an idea, all you have to do is pursue it. If you've ever dreamt of being something, on Saipan it's likely possible. You'll start endeavors out of desire, others out of pure necessity. You may arrive a doctor and end up a photographer. You may come to teach in the public school, and end up doing stand-up comedy. You may find that you want a different type of education for your kids, and start a school. You may lose 30 pounds and run a triathlon. You may be an environmentalist, who ends up representing the CNMI as a member of the National Football Team. You may write a book, act in a play, open a business, start a new degree, or all of these things. This sort of pursuit of the diverse facets of the soul is fairly typical on Saipan. If you've ever had an interest in something, Saipan is the place to explore it. You'll discover interests here you never knew you had.

Travel.

Most people live and die without a passport. My kids have a gazillion entry stamps in theirs. In our years here, we've traveled to China, Hong Kong, Taiwan, Japan, the Philippines, Thailand, Australia, Singapore, Bali, Papua New Guinea, and the islands of Micronesia.

Casual Atmosphere.

You'll never see a suit on the island. Sometimes you'll see a tie. You'll find people in t-shirts and shorts at all occasions: weddings, funerals, at work, in meetings of any kind, in fancy restaurants. A corollary to the casual nature of the island is that there is very little emphasis on material possessions. There is no such thing as keeping up with the Joneses. It doesn't much matter what you drive, where you live, or what the tags on your clothes say. The symbols of materialism take a back seat here.

Family First.

This is a double-edged sword, but it has changed me for the better. Family is more important than work. It's not a struggle to live your life under that premise here on Saipan. In America, you may want to, but the minute you try to take off work because your kids are sick, or because your sister needs help moving, or because you want to go fishing with your brother, you'll not be taken seriously as a member of the workforce. Your career will head into a skid. Here, it's the norm for people to miss work for any of these reasons, and it's actually encouraged. Why not? We say that work is not the most important thing in the world, but why not live in a way that shows we mean it? That's the way things are here, and I think it's a more sane way of living. Of course, things do suffer in the workplace, which can be frustrating as an employer or a co-worker, but you just try to plan for it.

BETTER LIVING

Letters to the Editor

No protection for alien workers

I would like to address this letter to all concerned, especially those in the Department Employment Services who are responsible for the implementation of the new and improved labor reform act of 2007.

It has been observed in the past, even before PL 15-108 came into effect, that a resident worker or a U.S. citizen, once hired by an employer for the position that had been occupied by a foreign worker for many years, would then resign after only two to three months to pursue his/her career off-island or simply don't like the job or cannot do the job.

This predicament has been going on for a long time now and is the most difficult thing for the adept foreign worker who loses his/her long-time job because of the implementation of the local preference law.

The new Employment Rules and Regulations" Part VI, Employment of Foreign Workers Section 2 of PL 15-108 under Private Sector Employment A – Management of the Labor Pool in the Commonwealth (last 3 lines) says: "Citizens and permanent resident employment and foreign national worker employment are BOTH necessary components of the Commonwealth Economic Success in the future." It seems that this last three lines of Private Sector Employment of the new labor reform law is contrary to that of Section 2B – Primary Job Preference that says: "Citizens and permanent residents shall be given a primary preference for employment in the Commonwealth. This requirement underlies all regulations with respect to the hiring, renewal, replacement, and termination of employees."

The word BOTH is useless under Section 2B primary job preference. In addition, under primary job preference section, it says: "An important part of the implementation of the primary job preference is emphasis on jobs and occupations for which citizens and permanent residents are or can be qualified and which should be attractive to them [emphasis added]."

I find it ridiculous, this emphasis on jobs and occupations for which citizens and permanent residents are or can be qualified and which should be attractive to them. The employer will not hire a citizen or resident worker only because a particular job is attractive to them. "Can be" is also unacceptable because a wise employer will not hire an ambiguous person only because of the local preference law. Absences and tardiness are among (if not all) the common practices of resident or citizen workers. The quality of work an employee can provide and the dedication to do the task is the best criteria on top of the employer's list. There is no provision under the new labor reform law that, in the event a citizen or a resident worker ceases to continue his/her employment after two or six months of employment, the Department of Employment Services will have the liability to recall the displaced foreign worker. It is unfair for the displaced foreign workers to note that a resident or citizen worker ceased to continue working after a few months because the new labor reform law provides no protection under these circumstances. I hope it is not their modus operandi to move foreign workers into a very uncomfortable situation that will lead to his/her deportation.

Puppy Police

I would like to commend the Tinian "Puppy Police." It seems that since the inception if the animal control laws that were put in place at the instigation of Mayor Jose San Nicholas of Tinian, the dog control people have finally learned how to write summons for the enforcement of the laws. I hope they are better at writing these summons than many of the new police recruits that may or may not have graduated from Tinian High School within the past years under their present high school principal.

Hey, let's get the full details on these tickets. What specifically were the infractions, what were the names of the people who got the summons? This is public record and can be had by going to the Clerk of Court on Tinian and requesting it.

Since there are no news people on the outer islands, I am thinking that this "news" was sent by the Mayor's Office on Tinian by one of his staff or by the persons that actually accomplished writing the animal violation summons.

Were the "ticketed" people locals, white people, (excuse me, blacks and other non-CNMI-U.S. citizens are also included). By god, maybe it was a contract worker. Any nationality will do.

Did the "puppy police" have to have DPS backup and help write and issue the citations? Were the offenders brought to jail and booked? (A hundred-dollar fine is the amount of most contempt of court bench warrant.) In the mainland and Hawaii, you are arrested and bailed out for breaking animal laws and the penalties are in excess of $100 plus possible jail time.

I am serious in the aforementioned questions, but all joking aside, I have the utmost respect for Mayor San Nicholas for putting in place this animal control law. It is long overdue and was passed in the Senate many years prior to his election. I am very familiar with the people who worked on this current local law.

The Mayor also has many other things that he has put in place that are very good indeed. The problem is his political hires and the Mayor cannot by himself be able to look at everything to see the shortfalls of his politically appointed people, who use strong-arm tactics against employers and employees who question the local government.

Saipan should take note of the Tinian's mayor's achievements in regards to animal control. In the past, it

Letters to the Editor

Let the people decide

It's really good to see the 16th Legislature trying to get it right by giving the critical decisions to the people. I have written many letters about how the Legislature has made poor decisions and how they have ignored the people in making the decision and its so good to see it wasn't all wasted. I want the thank and commend Rep. Heinz Hofschneider for taking the politically correct route of presenting his initiatives to the people and to Rep. Joseph Camacho for supporting the people in making the decision. I have often said that our attitude will determine our altitude and it is clear the attitude of the 16th Legislature is starting out to be much different from the previous Legislatures. After all, we didn't elect them to do their own bidding but to do what the people want done.

But if the Legislature really wants to fix one of the primary inhibitors to prosperity in the CNMI and truly take a giant step forward, they should go ahead and address the land alienation question now by changing the initiative to allow all U.S. citizens to own one house lot and one business lot and place a yearly property tax on all commercial property. I have heard all the different arguments for never changing the land alienation status but none of them can refute the federal law that demands every citizen have the right to own property. The indigenous people of the CNMI need to know that if there is no level of equity for all U.S. citizens after the 2011 vote, it will take only one official complaint to reach the federal courts and the CNMI will be facing federalization all over again on the land issue.

We shouldn't wait until our fathers in Washington have to step in on the land issue when we already know what needs to be done; we will only be asking for federalization all over again. But I pray we have at least learned this lesson from history and our present experiences with the feds on wage increases. We really need to fix the land issue and stop using band aid lease increases that don't even stick because extending the lease still won't attract investors for industries. Investors do have common sense about investing hundreds of millions on something they will own and not lease.

It's really common knowledge now that the land issue is the biggest drawback to the CNMI creating a fully developed economy with multiple industries. Adding a few years on a lease is really just another band aid on top of another band aid and if the people are going to decide, let the voters make the ultimate decision now. I was taught to never put off something you can do today for tomorrow; it's just delaying progress and it's really common sense.

If there is going to be a special election for these initiatives I also hope the Legislature will put a yes or no vote for federalization on the ballot so we can at least establish the true consensus of the majority or we will continue fighting the feds and each other over federalization with no real basis for our arguments as to what the majority of people want. The truth will set us all free of this back and forth over federalization. So let the people decide now on land and federalization—why put it off when it is really clear we need to take action now!

‘My response’

WJ Rozier has misread my letters or not read them at all, and I hope others will not jump to conclusions with this same fervor. The first area he and others mention is the love, caring about people and pro-immigration stance. We've covered this—check paragraph two of “McCue clarifies statements”—you can care and not be pro-immigration.

You then claim I said the US government is the worst system in the world, but if you re-read my letter you will see I said the opposite—it's the worst system in the world SAVE every other system, meaning it's the best system in the world.

You go on and want the politicians and government to care for and represent the views all the people. There is just such a system, and the mantra of it is this: From each according to his ability, to each according to his need. It's called communism. Just how long do you think anyone would stay in office if they started representing people that don't vote for them?

I've already stated that all citizens of the CNMI have an obligation to see that persons with a grievance are assisted. Not having a green card is not a grievance—see the hard, unspoken truth. Many points I made are your same points, of the reluctance to return to the country they came from, so no, I am not blind.

I do not recall the total amount of aid given to the CNMI but if memory serves me right, it is by far a lesser amount than all the other insular areas.

Contract workers have the same ability as all people to be good or evil, smart or less than smart, caring or uncaring and brave or timid. You said I belittled the contract workers. That is your perception, and as I said, I cannot do anything about your perception or lack of perception. You do not know if I am a billionaire or destitute, so saying I have so much and am very fortunate is without any basis. If federalization takes place as the feds see it, all the contract workers will have to leave within 4.5 years. Is that what they and you want?

PUPPY

seemed like the “puppy police” was engaging in the “selective” enforcement of the laws with these individuals, like the rest of CNMI. Depends on what name and color.

I have another question, though: What happened to the litter police? I remember when they all “graduated and had the “enforcement power” to issue tickets for littering. Why has nothing ever been heard from these people for, I think, over one year now? Are these people ghost employees or what? Is anyone still on the payroll?

We have so much volunteers cleaning up beach sites and many times the papers show the aftermath of a beach party. (Note: The Tinian Mayor's Office has “trash trailers” or bins located in all of the beaches and areas of beach assembly on Tinian.)

Artifacts teach kids about CNMI history

For the second year in a row, Fabian M. Indalecio displayed his collection of World War II relics and ancient Chamorro artifacts to Northern Marianas History, World History and Japanese Class students at the Saipan Southern High School.

Over 300 students had the opportunity to view the variety of relics and artifacts on display. As the students walked around looking at the items, they would call out questions to Indalecio.

"I've never seen this before," said one student. "Is this an egg?" pointing to an ancient Chamorro sling stone. Indalecio replied, "No, it's a sling stone used by ancient Chamorros for hunting, fighting or perhaps sports."

"Mr. Indalecio, is this for washing cloths?" pointing at a metate. "No, it's for grinding dried corn used by the Chamorro, perhaps introduced during Spanish time."

"It is my passion to collect and buy relics and artifacts pertaining to our history here in the CNMI," explained Indalecio to the students during his presentation.

He conceded that collecting and buying these artifacts is costing him a lot of money. "I really don't care about the money I spent," he said. "I love showing them to students and that is what is important, so they can have the actual visual experience."

Indalecio said he gets just as excited as the students when he sees them fascinated with the collection.

To press his point, Indalecio sponsored an essay competition this year, asking students to explain "Why collecting and preserving World War II relics and ancient Chamorro artifacts are important." This was the first time that Indalecio held this activity, using his own pocket money, with the support of his wife, Cheryl Indalecio.

Over 200 entries were submitted. The final winner was Josie Manalo, who won for herself $50. The second prize of $30 went to Da Hee Kim, while the third prize of $20 went to Fumi Nimura. The fourth prize, $20, went to Mariah Ada. (ST)

The importance of preserving relics of our past

By JOSIE MANALO
SPECIAL TO THE SAIPAN TRIBUNE

helps keep our traditions going strong. With Saipan advancing like the rest world, people are slowly forgetting the true meaning of being a Chamorro, how they came out to be, and what our ancestors before us did to shape that.

Our environment is rapidly changing; things are not the way they used to be. With technology advancing we're slowly losing the ways of our people. From cell phones to laptops, when you take a look around, you'll see something more advanced and fancier than the contraption before it. We've got to admit things are far different from how they were 30 years ago. Soon enough we find ourselves forgetting the old traditions that our parents, grandparents, and family members have been trying so hard to keep alive.

No matter where you live, events have taken place to help shape how that island, country, state, or continent came out to be, such as Saipan.

Before we became a commonwealth we were ruled by the Germans, Spanish, and then Japanese. During those times, though, when we had higher authority, our ancestors strove to keep their traditions living. With time changing they are slowly dying out. When you walk through the jungle and come across items you've never seen before, don't just walk by it, pick it up and bring it home. You might never know where, how or what time period it was from, or if it has a certain significance. Preserving these relics is important because it

Believe or not, even our native language seems to be slowly dying out. What can we as a people do to help prevent this? Preserving the relics of our ancestors is a big way to do that. By keeping rocks you may have found at the beach one day that came out to be arrowheads, glass bottles that turn out to be since the Japanese era, coins from the Spanish, and certain things like that—all have meaning to them. They are symbols of how our island came out the way it is today. It helps from forgetting the steps we took to become so advanced.

It does not matter if you're from the CNMI, U.S., or Philippines, our homeland did not just pop out with so many cars and buildings, they started with its natives, trees, animals, plants, and struggling for survival, before it became advanced. Keeping relics you've found is not just a benefit to you, but your people as well. By preserving them you help keep the traditions from dying out. By doing this you help us remember who we are, because it's a shame to forget the very people who helped shaped us today. Our surroundings may change, but let's not include our traditions as well.

Setting Pacific organic certification, standards

As demand for organic produce continues to grow worldwide, the Pacific's organic farmers are keen to produce and export organic products. But before they can market their products internationally, they need to show they are meeting accepted standards for organic production.

The Regional Organic Task Force has been given the job of drawing up suitable standards. Its second meeting will be held next week, March 17–21, 2007, at Rafles Gateway Hotel, Nadi, where members will review the second draft of the Pacific organic standards and finalize the document.

The ROTF is responsible for providing technical advice on the development of the organic sector in the Pacific. Its members, who are organic experts selected by each participating country, will come to the meeting after extensive canvassing of the views of national stakeholders. These views will feed into the development of the standards. Having harmonized Pacific standards will facilitate certification and reduce the costs associated with it. The standards will also be an opportunity to tell the story of Pacific organic agriculture to the world.

The meeting is being organized by the Secretariat of the Pacific Community and the International Fund for Agricultural Development. Both organizations are involved in a project to develop regional certification standards and a strategy for organic agriculture in the Pacific.

The meeting will also consider various options for organic certification and finalize an appropriate organic certification system for the region. The system will cover both the production and processing of organic food products in the Pacific.

At present, farmers exporting organic produce are at the whim of importing countries and the standards they have established, which are often linked to more stringent international standards. The Nadi meeting will be developing a Pacific-owned process for setting organic standards, which will become the basis for negotiating a regional standard acceptable to certifying bodies in other regions.

Fiji has joined the growing list of Pacific countries that have established a national organics association. The Fiji Organics Association was launched in September by the Interim Minister for Forests and Fisheries, Jeketani Cokanasiga.

FOA chair Sant Kumar said the U.S. and the EU are the largest markets for organic products. The global organic market reached $25 billion in 2005 from $13 billion in 1998. FOA has about 40 members and more farmers are being encouraged to get involved in organic farming. Crops that are currently certified in Fiji are cold-pressed coconut oil, spices from Spices of Fiji Limited and noni juice. (SPC)

Illegal aliens face deportation in Solomons

HONIARA, Solomon Islands (Solomon Star/PIR)—Forty-four Asians illegally working in the Solomon Islands logging industry have been given seven days to leave or be kicked out.

They came in on visitors' permits, but ended up working for a logging company without proper work permits.

Acting Commissioner of Labour Josiah Manehia said the seven day order was effective as of yesterday.

"They have until next Tuesday to leave voluntarily. Those who fail to do so will be arrested and deported," Mr Manehia said.

He said some of them would leave today.

Manehia said the Asians, from Malaysia and Indonesia, worked for a Malaysian logging company called Sam Lim Sam.

He said some of them were here since 2005. Most of them came in last year.

I wanted to ask if you have a message for the leaders of the world, what would you say to them?

SUPREME MASTER CHING HAI:
I would say to them to use their mighty power to change the diet of the planet, and adopt immediately new technology and renewable energy. Also, set an example themselves by becoming a vegetarian or vegan. Use their mighty power to set a new diet for the planet, the vegetarian diet.

THE ICE THAT MELTS TOO FAST THE CLIMATE THAT CHANGES TOO QUICKLY

URGENT QUIZ

To save our planet, we should:

1. Go Veg? Examples of nutritious, life saving food:
2. Drive Biofuel / Hybrid Vehicles?
3. Plant More Trees?
4. Change to Renewable Energy?
5. Pray?

Based on the latest satellite data cited in a December 2007 article, National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) climate scientist Jay Zwally predicts that nearly ALL THE ICE COULD BE GONE from the Arctic Ocean by THE END OF SUMMER 2012.

Tofu (from soya) 16% protein
Gluten (from flour) 70% protein
Corn 13% protein

Save our Lives!
We Love You

SOS
Go Veg! Be Green!

Thank you for your compassion

QUESTION:
Master, if you had a message for the world, what would it be?

SUPREME MASTER CHING HAI:
That I love them very much.

Because if the ice all melts, if the poles all melt away, and then if the sea is warm, then the gas will be released from the ocean, and we'll all be poisoned by the gas from the ocean. It's a lot of gas, enough to kill everyone.

If you see the Singapore lecture (January 10, 1995), I already warned that we have to change the way we live; otherwise it's too late. That was 10 or 15 years ago. Or before that, I always talked about how we deforest our planet. Meat eating and all that contributes to a lot of damage to our Earth planet.

Scientists say many things. They are listening now, but I just hope they do it fast. It just takes action.

Because the ice is reflecting the sun, you see, so it sends it back into space, but the ice is melting so fast now that there's not enough reflection and because the sea is already warm, it melts the ice. And because the ice melts, the sea is warmer. You see what I mean, the cycle?

The way it is going, if they don't fix it, in 4 or 5 years time, finito. No more. It's really that urgent

Roughing it: The benefits of eating fiber

By JILL VANDERKIN, R.D.
SPECIAL TO THE SAIPAN TRIBUNE

Editor's Note: Jill Vanderkin is a registered dietician at the Department of Public Health.

Have you ever heard somebody say, "Eat your roughage" and wondered what is that supposed to mean? What is roughage anyway?

Roughage is another word for fiber. If somebody said to you, "I found something that can help you lose weight. You can eat a lot and feel really full. It also protects you against heart disease, many types of cancer, and diabetes!", maybe you're thinking, "How much does this miracle pill cost, and what's the catch?" Well, there's no cost and

How can you get more fiber in your diet?

- Switch to bran cereal. Bran has even more fiber than other grain choices, so to get the biggest fiber load, pick bran cereals.

- Eat fruit and vegetables with the skin or peel on (potatoes, carrots, taro, radishes, apples, and pears).

- Add fresh fruit (like papaya) to oatmeal or other whole grain cereal (at least four grams of fiber/serving) for breakfast.

- Eat fruit instead of drinking juice.

- Use breads and cereals that have WHOLE grain flour listed as the first ingredient.

- Eat popcorn, vegetables or fruit for snacks and dessert.

- Eat brown, basmati, or jasmine rice instead of white.

- Include more beans in your meals: add to casseroles, chili, burritos, soups, and salads.

no catch! In fact, there's no pill either! The miracle is fiber, and it can really do all these things for you.

Some people with diabetes have focused on eating a lot of fiber, and they have controlled their diabetes with just fiber alone. Others have been able to decrease their insulin or medicines by eating more fiber, and almost all people, in every study, have been successful at losing weight. The fiber really makes our digestive system work and it slows down the rate at which sugar enters our blood.

So what is the catch then? Well, you have to eat enough fiber. It's that simple. The newest recommendations are for about 24-40 grams each day (14 grams of fiber for every 1,000 calories you eat). In comparison, I would say that most people I have talked to in the CNMI eat around 5-10 grams of fiber each day! That's a big difference!

Can you eat too much fiber? No way! Fiber doesn't turn into calories, so you can eat a lot of it and feel really full, but not gain weight. In fact, in a lot of studies, people had to eat 50 grams a day to really see major benefits. It's not easy to eat that much fiber. You need to really focus, but the results are well worth it! You'll want to start slow (don't jump into a fibrous diet all at once) to let your body adjust to all the fiber. It takes more work for our bodies to digest fiber and that can cause a bloated feeling if you're not used to it. Your body will adjust quickly, though, so don't give up in those first few weeks! What have you got to lose?

Gas prices jump, oil hits $110

NEW YORK (AP)—Gasoline and oil prices extended their record-setting streaks Wednesday, with gas at the pump reaching a new high of nearly $3.25 and crude surpassing $110 for the first time.

The gains came as a weakening dollar led investors to shrug off an Energy Department report that crude oil and gasoline supplies jumped last week.

The national average price of a gallon of regular gas rose by 1.9 cents overnight to $3.246 a gallon, a new record, according to AAA and the Oil Price Information Service. Pump prices are following crude's recent surge, and could rise as high as $3.75 a gallon this spring, analysts say.

Meanwhile, light, sweet crude for April delivery rose $1.17 to settle at a record $109.92 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange after earlier rising to a new trading record of $110.20.

The dollar weakened throughout the day Wednesday, setting a number of new lows against the euro and attracting new buyers to the oil market. Crude futures offer a hedge against a falling dollar, and oil futures bought and sold in dollars are more attractive to foreign investors when the dollar is weak.

Dollar falls to record low against euro

NEW YORK (AP)—The dollar fell against most major currencies on Wednesday, including a new low against the euro, which fetched $1.55, as skepticism grew over the latest U.S. Federal Reserve Bank plan to restore calm to jittery global credit markets.

The Fed action was overshadowed by U.S. economic struggles, halting the dollar's rise and pushing the euro to a record high of $1.5559, surpassing its previous record of $1.5495 set Tuesday.

Late Wednesday, the 15-nation euro fell back to $1.5526 - still above the $1.5319 it bought in New York late Tuesday.

"The positive dollar impact of yesterday's coordinated central bank operations is already proving unsustainable as the U.S. currency falls across the board," said Ashraf Laidi, the chief foreign exchange strategist for CMC Markets in New York.

Traders also weighed a report from Zawya Dow Jones that said the United Arab Emirates was deciding whether to continue pegging its currency to the plummeting U.S. dollar.

The British pound rose to $2.0243 from $2.0029 even after British Treasury Chief Alistair Darling cut forecasts for domestic growth when he delivered his first annual budget against the backdrop of the worst global economic conditions for a decade.

In other late New York trading, the dollar dropped to 102.04 Japanese yen from 104.17 yen and to 1.0182 Swiss francs from 1.0337 Swiss francs it traded Tuesday. Meanwhile, the dollar edged up to 1.0096 Canadian dollars from 1.0067 Canadian dollars.

Welcome to 'The Coke Side Of Life' Guam

GUAM—Coca Cola will be promoting "The Coke Side of Life," the national theme for the Coca Cola brand for two years now, in Guam.

An array of events will interpret and celebrate all elements of life (family, friends, community, youth, etc.) Along with these events, Coke will also promote new products within these events. The first round will include an image-driven campaign, which would include media such as newspaper, television, and radio.

Introducing 'The Coke Side of Life' to Guam's community will be through a Bottle Burst Poster Contest and a Can Decorating Contest for schools. Winning posters and cans will be publicly displayed as posters or murals though out the island. Events to follow after the poster contest will also include night-life, movies, family, and a major sporting exhibition to reinforce Coke's national sponsorship of the 2008 Olympics. The 2009 Coke calendar will be dedicated to sports and will show case the island's rising athletes and sports played here on island.

"Coca-Cola is all about sharing, happiness, and people coming together and having a good time. Here at Coca-Cola we want to reflect this in all aspects in life", said Ernest Mak, director of operations Coca-Cola Beverage Company, Guam.

The Coca-Cola Company is the world's largest beverage company. For more information, visit <http://www.coca-cola.com>. (PR)

Stocks dip a day after huge rally

NEW YORK (AP)—Wall Street's euphoria over a $200 billion plan from the Federal Reserve turned to caution Wednesday, leading stocks to retreat a day after their biggest rally in more than five years.

Investors largely regard the plan the Fed announced Tuesday to lend Treasuries in exchange for debt tied to mortgages as an innovative means of bringing some relief to the tight credit markets. But they are hesitant to pour more money into stocks without signs that the decision will help turn around the economy - particularly with data on retail sales and consumer prices scheduled to arrive later this week.

"Does it address the main concern, and that's weaker housing? That has not been resolved just yet," said Steven Goldman, chief market strategist at Weeden & Co. "If we are in the midst of a recession, and only a couple months into the recession, we might need a couple more months to plod our way through this."

After shooting higher Tuesday, most bank stocks declined again Wednesday. Even if the credit markets ease up a bit, banks and other lenders still face a deteriorating climate for consumer credit and many are low on cash.

How to overcome a career gap after layoff or time off

By MARY ELLEN SLAYTER
(C) 2008, THE WASHINGTON POST

Molly Conlon Hogan has been at home caring for her child since a 2004 layoff and now wants a communications job.

Beth Colley, owner of Chesapeake Resume Writing Service in Crownsville, Md., said Hogan shouldn't dwell on her years out of the paid workforce. "With a strong enough resume and cover letter, Molly should be able to overcome the gap."

Hogan should briefly explain in her cover letter that she was laid off after a corporate restructuring and decided that was a good time to concentrate on her family, said Colley, who frequently works with parents returning to the workforce.

To highlight Hogan's skills, Colley suggests overhauling the format of the resume. "When you've been out of the workforce for a few years, you may be better served with a combined style format."

Colley suggests that Hogan include a career summary highlighting specific aspects about her background. "It should be relevant (and) concise."

Within the body of the resume, Hogan can choose headings depending on the skills she wants to emphasize, Colley said. "Then underneath each heading, she can incorporate bullet points specifically related to that skill set regardless of when or where she did it."

For example, she could use bullets from four jobs under "Marketing and Communications." "Include numbers or percentages where possible. Don't provide a basic generic statement that you would find in a job description."

Art of the deal, speed dating style

NEW YORK (AP)—The days when investment banks would spend time wooing big investors over a leisurely meal, with booze and cigars afterward, may be on their way out.

Now, firms such as Germany's Dresdner Kleinwort can play matchmaker through "speed investing" sessions. It may not be as genteel, but it gives European companies like Lloyds TSB and retailer Burberry a chance to woo deep-pocketed American investors.

Wall Street's twist on speed dating allots companies about 20 minutes to sell themselves before mutual funds and other institutional investors. A buzzer rings, time is up, and they all switch tables.

This unconventional form of dealmaking offers a new way portfolio managers might find the next stock for your 401(k).

"This is a clever way of meeting people," said Henry De Vismes, a former Citigroup Inc. executive that now runs his own wealth management shop based in New York. "I try to meet about four companies a week, but here I can see 20 in a day. You have to do your homework because it can be quite intense."

Typically, a company embarks on a formal road show to meet hundreds of investors at once - limiting the amount of time for any face-to-face meetings. Top corporate executives rarely meet with smaller wealth managers. Instead, they clear the decks for big-name outfits like Merrill Lynch & Co. or Fidelity Investments.

The speed investing events gives would-be investors the basics about a company, often from the head of investor relations. If there's a match, both sides arrange a longer meeting before investing any money.

Like investors that attend, companies say the approach helps them reach out to money managers not normally on their radar. A recent speed investing event, held in a Midtown hotel in New York City, featured companies like Swiss drug maker Novartis AG, food and drinks company Diageo PLC, and pay-TV operator British Sky Broadcasting PLC.

"You have no idea how whites of the eyes contact is important," said Michael Oliver, director of investor relations for London-based retail bank Lloyds. "This is an addition to what we do, and won't replace road shows we go on. But, so far it's been a great success."

That's exactly what Dresdner's Nick Seaward wants to hear. He came up with the idea a few years ago to cut back the amount it takes to court new shareholders—and help introduce companies to a bigger swath of the investment community.

Adult Finances 101

By DAVID UFFINGTON
(C) 2008 KING FEATURES SYND., INC.

Many of us took a high-school class called something like "General Business," designed to teach us how to write a check, fill out job applications and create a simple budget, but that didn't begin to prepare us for the realities of handling money in adulthood.

Where, as adults, do we go to learn about money? The government's Financial Literacy and Education Commission has created a "My Money" Web site full of information we need, almost a do-it-yourself money course. This is a very comprehensive site, covering topics such as home ownership, how to pay for a college education, budgeting and taxes, frauds and scams, and starting a small business. Each links to the appropriate government agency where even more information is presented. The site is well worth the time it takes to investigate and read.

Additionally the site offers a free My Money tool kit, containing nine publications packed with good information, that you can get for free or access online:

■ The best of the tool kits is a 32-page booklet called Savings Fitness: A Guide to Your Money and Your Financial Future. This alone is worth sending for as an overview of financial topics and guidance. It covers your financial dreams, getting started with a savings plan, setbacks, planning for re-irement and more.

■ The Consumer Action Handbook is a 176-page consumer book with topics such writing complaint letters, auto manufacturer resolution programs, and state and federal agency contact information.

■ Also worth having is the Consumer Information Catalog, a list of education resources from the Federal Citizen Information Center. The information pamphlets are either free or very low cost, and the list of topics is nearly endless. The catalog comes out four times a year. The publications themselves can be seen at www.pueblo.gsa.gov, the government's printing arm. There's a $2 savings if you order your pamphlets online.

■ Get the Facts on Saving and Investing walks you through calculating your net worth, setting your goals, picking an investment product and determining your risk tolerance.

You can access the My Money tool kit online at mymoney.gov, order it online or call to have your own free tool kit sent to you. Call Monday through Friday at 1-888-696-6639 (888-mymoney) between 8 a.m. and 8 p.m.

Spitzer resigns in disgrace over scandal

By VERENA DOBNIK and MICHAEL GORMLEY
ASSOCIATED PRESS WRITERS

NEW YORK (AP)—In a startlingly swift fall from grace, Gov. Eliot Spitzer resigned Wednesday after getting caught in a call-girl scandal that made a mockery of his straight-arrow image and left him facing the prospect of criminal charges and perhaps disbarment.

"I cannot allow my private failings to disrupt the people's work," Spitzer said, his weary-looking wife, Silda, standing at his side, again, as the corruption-fighting politician once known as Mr. Clean answered for his actions for the second time in three days.

He made the announcement without securing a plea bargain with federal prosecutors, though a law enforcement official said the former governor was still believed to be negotiating one. The official spoke on condition of anonymity because of the sensitivity of the case.

Spitzer will be succeeded on Monday by Lt. Gov. David Paterson, a fellow Democrat who becomes New York's first black governor and the nation's first legally blind chief executive.

The resignation brought the curtain down on a riveting three-day drama—played out, sometimes, as farce—that made Spitzer an instant punchline on late-night TV and fascinated Americans with the spectacle of a crusading politician exposed as a hypocrite.

His dizzying downfall was met with glee and the popping of champagne corks among many on Wall Street, where Spitzer was seen as a sanctimonious bully for attacking big salaries and abusive practices in the financial industry when he was New York attorney general. And his resignation brought relief at the state Capitol in Albany after days of excruciating tension and uncertainty.

"Some rules can't be broken, and when they are broken there are consequences," said state Assemblyman John McEneny, a Democrat. "In this case, one of the most promising careers I've seen in a generation."

The scandal erupted Monday

after federal law enforcement officials disclosed that a wiretap had caught the 48-year-old father of three teenage daughters spending thousands of dollars on a call girl at a fancy Washington hotel on the night before Valentine's Day.

Investigators said he had arranged for a prostitute named Kristen to take the train down from New York while he was in the nation's capital to testify before a congressional subcommittee about the bond industry.

Late Wednesday, the New York Times reported that her real name is Ashley Alexandra

Dupre. She declined to comment when asked by the Times when she first met Spitzer and how many times they had been together.

It was unclear whether she would face charges; attorney Don D. Buchwald confirmed that he represents the same woman in the Times story but wouldn't comment further.

With every development, it became increasingly clear that Spitzer, politically, was finished.

Law enforcement officials said the governor—the millionaire heir to a New York real estate fortune—had hired prostitutes several times before and had spent tens of thousands of dollars, and perhaps as much as $80,000, on the high-priced escort service Emperors Club VIP, whose women charge as much as $5,500 an hour.

Senior Spitzer aides, speaking on condition of anonymity because of the sensitivity of the matter, said Spitzer had been informed Friday by federal prosecutors that he was linked to the prostitution ring.

They said he had kept it to himself through Saturday night, when he attended the annual dinner of the Gridiron Club in Washington. That night a reporter kept calling cell phones of Spitzer aides.

Spitzer first shared the news Sunday with his wife at their Manhattan apartment, and after several excruciating hours they told their daughters, the aides said. By Sunday evening Spitzer had called top advisers, personal friends and loyalists. The little band huddled in the apartment until midnight.

After making a watery-eyed, non-specific public apology Monday with his wife by his side, Spitzer continued to talk to family and advisers through Tuesday. By Wednesday morning, aides said, he had decided to resign.

He and his wife rode in a black SUV from their Fifth Avenue apartment to his New York City office to announce his resignation—a trip whose every move was captured by TV helicopters. During the news conference, he and his wife stood inches apart, never touching as they entered or left the room.

Speaking in a strong and steady voice, he apologized for his actions and said: "Over the course of my public life, I've insisted, I believe correctly, that people regardless of their position or power take responsibility for their conduct. I can and will ask no less of myself."

He did not address the allegations in any detail in the less than three-minute statement, and left without taking questions.

Officials said that Paterson asked for the Monday hand-over because he needed more time to prepare and wanted Spitzer to say the proper goodbye to his staff.

Spitzer call girl reportedly identified

NEW YORK (AP)—New details emerged Wednesday about the call girl at the center of the prostitution scandal engulfing New York's governor, with a newspaper report identifying her as a 22-year-old aspiring musician from Manhattan.

The New York Times reported that the real name of the woman—identified as "Kristen" in court papers alleging that Gov. Eliot Spitzer paid more than $4,000 for prostitutes' services—is Ashley Alexandra Dupre.

Don D. Buchwald, a New York lawyer, confirmed to The Associated Press that he represents Ashley Alexandra Dupre, the same woman in the Times story. "That's as far as I can go," he said.

A man who answered the phone at her mother's home in New Jersey and identified himself as Dupre's brother told The Associated Press he had no idea why Dupre would agree to be interviewed in the scandal.

"I've talked to my sister every five minutes since this happened, and I'm not going to comment on it," he said.

"She's just trying to get through this."

Dupre's MySpace page provides a window into her life as she went from a broken home in New Jersey to a music career in the city.

"I have been alone. I have abused drugs. I have been broke and homeless. But, I survived, on my own. I am here, in NY because of my music," she wrote.

In an Aug. 30 blog posting on MySpace, she writes: "The past few months have been a roller coaster with so called friends, lovers, and family... but its something you have to deal with and confront in order to move on..."

"What destroys me strengthens me" is the slogan next to a Dupre photograph. The photos show her at various places, including in a bikini on a boat in a tropical locale. The number of hits to the page soared by the tens of thousands after the story broke.

Dupre describes her favorite musical artists as Etta James, Aretha Franklin, Celine Dion, Christina Aguilera and Frank Sinatra, among many others.

Her Web site boasts a recording of a song, "What We Want." "I know what you want, you got what I want. I know what you need. Can you handle me?" she sings.

She briefly spoke to the Times about the Spitzer scandal. Law enforcement officials identified the governor as a "Client 9" who had a Feb. 13 tryst with "Kristen" and paid her $4,300, according to court papers.

"I just don't want to be thought of as a monster," Dupre told the Times. "This has been a very difficult time. It's complicated."

She told the newspaper she had slept very little since the allegations against Spitzer were revealed.

Dupre told the Times she worried about paying her rent in a ninth-floor Manhattan apartment after her boyfriend recently left her. She said she was considering moving back in with her family in New Jersey.

Records show that Dupre lives in Manhattan on West 25th Street, where a gaggle of reporters and TV trucks quickly gathered Wednesday night. It is a luxury rental skyscraper called The Chelsea Landmark where rents start at $3500 a month for a small studio, neighbors said. The 35-story building opened less than a year ago.

She declined to comment when asked by the Times when she first met Spitzer and how many times they had been together.

Dupre apparently appeared in federal court Monday as a witness in the case against four people accused of operating the Emperors Club VIP prostitution ring.

Clinton apologizes to black voters

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Hillary Rodham Clinton did something Wednesday night that she almost never does. She apologized. And once she started, she didn't seem able to stop.

The New York senator, who is in a tight race with Illinois Sen. Barack Obama for the Democratic presidential nomination, struck several sorry notes at an evening forum sponsored by the National Newspaper Publishers Association, a group of more than 200 black community newspapers across the country.

Her biggest apology came in response to a question about comments by her husband, Bill Clinton, after the South Carolina primary, which Obama won handily. Bill Clinton said Jesse Jackson also won South Carolina when he ran for president in 1984 and 1988, a comment many viewed as belittling Obama's success.

"I want to put that in context. You know I am sorry if anyone was offended. It was certainly not meant in any way to be offensive," Hillary Clinton said. "We can be proud of both Jesse Jackson and Senator Obama."

"Anyone who has followed my husband's public life or my public life know very well where we have stood and what we have stood for and who we have stood with," she said, acknowledging that whoever wins the nomination will have to heal the wounds of a bruising, historic contest.

"Once one of us has the nomination there will be a great effort to unify the Democratic party and we will do so, because, remember I have a lot of supporters who have voted for me in very large numbers and I would expect them to support Senator Obama if he were the nominee," she said.

2 charged in UNC student leader slaying

HILLSBOROUGH, N.C. (AP) -- A man charged with murdering the University of North Carolina student body president was arrested Wednesday as detectives hunted for a second suspect.

Police would not say which suspect they believe shot and killed Eve Carson, 22, of Athens, Ga., who was found a week ago lying on a street about a mile from campus. The biology and political science major had been shot several times, including once in the right temple.

In the days after Carson's death, police focused their investigation on several ATM and convenience store surveillance photos.

The school's Board of Trustees offered a $25,000 reward for information leading to an arrest, and police received hundreds of tips after the first two photos were released over the weekend.

Demario James Atwater, 21, was arrested early Wednesday as he left a home in Durham that police had placed under surveillance after receiving a tip.

Shackled at the ankles and waist, and with a public defender at his side, Atwater appeared to have a wound and a bruise on his right cheek at his court appearance. Chapel Hill Police Chief Brian Curran said officers had taken him to a hospital as "part of the evidence collection" process.

Atwater was ordered held without bond on a charge of first-degree murder. His next court date was set for March 24.

"I hope the arrest can ease the minds of some in the community," said Orange County District Attorney Jim Woodall.

Police said they are still searching for the second suspect, 17-year-old Lawrence Alvin Lovette Jr., who was thought to be armed and dangerous.

A police SWAT team was called to a Durham home during the manhunt, but the brief standoff appeared to have ended without an arrest, City Councilman Eugene Brown said. Neither Chapel Hill nor Durham police would comment.

Police believe Lovette, who also was charged with murder, was pictured in two photos taken at an ATM, driving Carson's Toyota Highlander with Atwater in the back seat. Police also believe Atwater was the suspect shown trying to use Carson's ATM card inside a convenience store.

Curran has previously declined to say when the surveillance photos were taken or the exact location of the ATM and convenience store, or whether any money was successfully withdrawn from Carson's account.

Smog rule tightened; 345 counties fail

WASHINGTON (AP)—The air in hundreds of U.S. counties is simply too dirty to breathe, the government said Wednesday, ordering a multi-billion-dollar expansion of efforts to clean up smog in cities and towns nationwide.

The Environmental Protection Agency announced it was tightening the amount of ozone, commonly known as smog, that will be allowed in the air. But the lower standard still falls short of what most health experts say is needed to significantly reduce heart and asthma attacks from breathing smog-clogged air.

EPA Administrator Stephen Johnson called the new limits "the most stringent standards ever," and he said they will require 345 counties - out of more than 700 that are monitored - to make air quality improvements because they now have dirtier air than is healthy to breathe.

Johnson said that state and local officials have considerable time to meet the requirements - as much as 20 years for some that have the most serious pollution problems. EPA estimates that by 2020 the number of counties failing to meet the new health standard will drop to about 28.

About 85 counties still fall short of the old standard enacted a decade ago.

Some of those chronic polluters are far above the old limit. Los Angeles County and a large swath of southern California, for example, and a long stretch from Washington up to New England on the East Coast. Some areas that would be newly included under the stricter standard include Indianapolis and Cleveland's Cuyahoga County in the Midwest; Mobile, Ala., and Jacksonville, Fla., in the South and El Paso, Texas, and Tulsa, Okla., out West.

All of Florida and Oklahoma currently comply with the smog standard. Nine counties in each state are unable to meet the tougher requirement.

Boys survive being tossed from overpass

DALLAS (AP)—Motorists watched in horror Wednesday as a woman tossed two young boys off a freeway overpass, then took the two-story leap into rush-hour traffic herself. But the shocking moment had an incredibly fortunate ending.

Police said Khandi Busby and her children, ages 8 and 6, somehow survived the fall onto Interstate 30's fast lane and the rush of vehicles.

"It was really miraculous that we didn't have some fatalities with this incident," Dallas police spokesman Sgt. Gil Cerda said.

Busby, 27, was in fair condition, a hospital spokeswoman said. Police said her sons were stable at another hospital, but hospital officials declined to comment later Wednesday. The three were able to speak with investigators, although the 8-year-old may have suffered internal injuries.

Busby had not been arrested as of Wednesday but could face two charges of attempted capital murder, Cerda said.

"The why remains a mystery to us," police Lt. C.L. Williams said. "If you try to apply logic to these incidents, they totally defy any logical explanation."

Shortly before 6:30 a.m. Wednesday, Busby and her sons walked away from her father, who had stopped for gas while driving them to a friend's house. Police do not know why Busby left with her children.

Hong Kong shuts schools in flu outbreak

HONG KONG (AP)—Hong Kong ordered more than half a million primary and kindergarten students Wednesday to stay home for two weeks because of a flu outbreak in one of the world's most densely populated cities.

The government also asked one of its top scientists to investigate the deaths of three children. But the World Health Organization said only two of the children tested positive for the flu, and both had other diseases as well.

The outbreak has not been linked to bird flu, which was detected in birds in Hong Kong. Bird flu remains difficult for humans to catch, but scientists fear the virus that causes it could eventually mutate into a form that spreads easily among humans.

The government has ordered all kindergartens, primary and special education schools closed for two weeks starting Thursday, Health Secretary York Chow said. School children - along with teachers and parents - wore masks Wednesday as they walked outside.

The schools had been expected to start their Easter Holiday in a little over a week, though the date varies with each school. Chow said bringing the holiday forward would help reduce cross infection among school children and calm public fears.

"When children are at school, it's very hard to keep them still and prevent them from contacting each other. They may not listen to orders and wear masks or wash their hands. This is an effective measure from an infectious disease standpoint," Chow said.

The closure will affect nearly 560,000 students at 1,745 schools, according to enrollment figures from the 2006-2007 academic year.

Since March 6, health officials have recorded nine flu outbreaks, mostly at schools, affecting 532 people in the territory of nearly 7 million.

Chow emphasized that there was no sign of "any significant change of the virus that makes it exceptionally more virulent than the usual flu virus."

The flu cases so far are scattered across the territory, which does not suggest the spread of an exceptionally virulent virus, P.L. Ho, a scientist at the University of Hong Kong's microbiology department, said in an interview with Cable TV.

‘Corruption spooks businesses more than security risks in RP’

MANILA, Philippines (AP)—Widespread corruption has deterred fresh investment in the Philippines more than security risks such as the communist and Muslim insurgencies, a foreign business leader said Wednesday.

Corruption has permeated most levels of government, damaging the country's international image and preventing it from getting some of the huge

Western investments being drawn by China and other regional economic powerhouses, said Michael Clancy, who heads the Philippine Business Leaders' Forum, a club of 240 senior executives from 40 multinational companies.

The executives' companies are involved in oil, banking, logistics and services.

"It's not a country for the faint-hearted," Clancy told reporters on the sidelines of a conference on East Asian economic integration. "It's a country that you need to approach with caution."

Citing experiences by foreign businessmen he has met in Manila, Clancy said security risks constitute about 1 percent of their concerns.

"Corruption will be 99 percent," he said.

In the results of an annual survey released earlier Wednesday by Hong Kong-based Political and Economic Risk Consultancy Ltd., or PERC, the Philippines was seen as the most corrupt out of 13 Asian economies, receiving a 9.0 rating on a 0-to-10 scale, followed by Thailand at 8.0, and China and Indonesia at 7.98.

Still, corruption has not forced foreign companies to withdraw from the Philippines, Clancy said, but it has discouraged them from expanding and hampered the entry of new investors. Red tape and poor infrastructure are also key concerns, he said.

"What they're saying to me is everywhere you turn, somebody has got their hands out for money," Clancy said, adding that he had never paid a bribe here. "You need 100 permits and every one of those 100 signatures want something under the table. I said, 'Forget it.'"

Indian police detain Tibetan exiles

DEHRA, India (AP)—Police detained more than 100 Tibetan exiles marching in northern India to Tibet in protest of China's Olympic Games early Thursday morning, organizers and officials said.

Indian authorities fear that the march, which began Monday and was expected to last about six months, could embarrass Beijing. Police had banned the exiles from leaving the Kangra district that surrounds Dharmasala, the headquarters of the Tibetan government-in-exile.

Shortly after the protesters set off early Thursday morning, police stopped the march in the town of Dehra, about 12 miles from the district boundary, and forced about 130 protesters into buses.

The protesters shouted "Free Tibet" and other slogans as they were being detained, but there was no violence at the scene, witnesses said.

The group, which included several foreigners, was taken to a nearby police station, said Sitaram, a local police official who goes by one name.

Organizers vowed to continue the march.

"We will have to find a way," said Tenzin Palkyi, one of the march coordinators. "Our legal team will deal with the police."

ASIAN BRIEFS

4 Afghan civilians killed during battle

LONDON (AP)—Four civilians were killed during a firefight in southern Afghanistan in which British troops called in an airstrike to fight off an ambush by insurgents, British and NATO officials said Wednesday. Although some British media reported that the Ministry of Defense said the air attack killed the civilians, a spokeswoman told The Associated Press that it hadn't been determined if that was the cause. NATO said the incident was being investigated. The NATO force and a separate U.S.-led coalition have been strongly criticized by Afghans over civilian deaths during military operations. Both forces said they regretted any such deaths and worked out to avoid such incidents.

Spreading attacks worry Pakistani police

LAHORE, Pakistan (AP)—Security officials warned Wednesday that this week's suicide truck bombing marked a dangerous escalation by militants who are now striking across Pakistan. A police report obtained by The Associated Press shed light on how militants are finding recruits outside their strongholds along the Afghan border. A yearlong wave of suicide bombings has intensified in recent weeks, posing a stiff challenge to the victors of the Feb. 18 election as they prepare to form a government and begin a new era of civilian rule after eight years of military domination under President Pervez Musharraf. Five of the 16 bomb attacks this year have been in the east—in Punjab, Pakistan's biggest and most prosperous province, including its main city of Lahore, which has been hit three times in two months.

Malaysia's Anwar resurrects career

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP)—Accused of sodomy and convicted of corruption, former Deputy Prime Minister Anwar Ibrahim was stuck in political limbo for nearly a decade. But he has resurrected his career with spectacular electoral gains and may soon be back in parliament. The charismatic Anwar worked tirelessly for more than a year to meld the ideologically divided opposition into an alliance that shook up a country ruled by the same coalition since independence from Britain in 1957. Although it won Saturday's election, the governing National Front lost its two-thirds parliamentary majority for the first time. More significantly, the opposition coalition won control of the governments in five of Malaysia's 13 states. Even government supporters called it a "political tsunami."

China faces criticism as Olympics near

BEIJING (AP)—China is denying mountaineers permission to climb its side of Mount Everest this spring, a move that reflects concerns by the communist government that Tibet activists may try to disrupt its plans to carry the Olympic torch up the world's tallest peak. In recent days, everyone from the U.S. government to rights groups and George Clooney have urged China to tackle issues as varied as its restrictions on religion; the poor working conditions of migrant labor; Beijing's oil purchases from Sudan to fuel the Darfur crisis; and Tibet. The Everest restrictions were contained in a letter the government's mountaineering association sent this week to expedition companies.

Telecom tower burned in west Afghanistan

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP)—A telecommunications tower was set ablaze in western Afghanistan, a police official said Wednesday, the latest such attack since insurgents warned phone companies to shut down the towers at night. Five militants set fire to the generator, fuel tank and antenna of the tower Tuesday night in the Obe district of Herat province, said Raouf Ahmadi, a regional police spokesman. The tower belonged to the Areeba company. At least two other Areeba towers have been hit, as well as three more owned by the Roshan company. Most attacks have been in the insurgency-plagued southern provinces.

Hamas sets terms for Israel cease-fire

GAZA CITY, Gaza Strip (AP)—The Hamas prime minister called publicly Wednesday for a period of calm with Israel, laying out conditions that would end attacks on Palestinian militants, open Gaza's borders and lift economic sanctions.

But shortly after the appeal by Ismail Haniyeh, Israeli troops opened fire on a car in the West Bank town of Bethlehem and killed four Palestinian militants, clouding the prospects for a cease-fire.

Among the conditions for an end to fighting that Haniyeh set earlier was a halt to Israeli military operations in the West Bank.

"We are talking about a mutual comprehensive calm, which means that the enemy must fulfill its obligations," Haniyeh said in a speech at Gaza City's Islamic University. "The Israelis must stop the aggression ... including assassinations and invasions, end the sanctions and open the borders."

Last French WWI veteran dies

PARIS (AP)—France's last remaining veteran of World War I died Wednesday at age 110 after outliving 8.4 million Frenchmen who fought in what they called "la Grande Guerre."

Lazare Ponticelli, who was born in Italy but chose to fight for France and was a French citizen for most of the past century, died at his home in the Paris suburb of Kremlin-Bicetre, the national veterans' office said.

"It is to him and his generation that we owe in large part the peaceful and pacified Europe of today. It is up to us to be worthy of that," President Nicolas Sarkozy said in a statement.

France planned a national funeral ceremony Monday honoring Ponticelli and all the "poilus," an affectionate term meaning hairy or tough that the French use for their soldiers who fought in World War I.

The 1914-1918 conflict, known at the time as the Great War or the "war to end all wars," tore Europe apart and killed millions. Only a handful of World War I veterans are still living, scattered from Australia to the United States and Europe. Germany's last WWI veteran died on New Year's Day.

Iraq: US military says it killed child

Awakening council member looks at the damage after a truck bomb exploded at a nearby Awakening Council checkpoint in Duluiyah, 70 kilometers (45 miles) north of Baghdad, Iraq, Wednesday, March 12, 2008.

BAGHDAD (AP)—U.S. soldiers fired a warning shot near a woman who "appeared to be signaling to someone" along a dangerous stretch of road north of Baghdad, but the bullet killed a young Iraqi girl, a military official said early Thursday.

The shooting took place Wednesday where several roadside bombs had recently been found in the volatile Diyala province. An exact location was not given in a military statement.

The girl appeared to be "around 10 years old," said Maj. Brad Leighton, a military spokesman.

There has been an increase in the use of women as suicide bombers in Iraq. But Leighton said preliminary reports indicated that soldiers didn't believe the woman posed a threat of being a bomber. Rather "they were afraid she was signaling to someone that the convoy was going by."

In its statement, the military said that "coalition forces fired a warning shot into a berm near a suspicious woman who appeared to be signaling to someone while the soldiers were in the area. A young girl was found behind the berm suffering from a gunshot wound."

Roadside bombs have been the biggest killer of American troops in Iraq.

Soldiers gave the girl medical attention and called for an evacuation. The girl died on the way to a medical facility, the statement said.

"Coalition forces take the loss of any innocent civilian life seriously and the incident will be thoroughly investigated," military spokesman Maj. Dan Meyers said in the statement.

WORLD BRIEFS

Russia slams US report as biased

MOSCOW (AP)—In a sometimes bitter, sometimes sarcastic statement Wednesday, the Russian Foreign Ministry said the portrayal of Russia in the 2007 human rights report was prejudiced, mistaken, poorly sourced and counterproductive. The ministry said the report reflected the "double standards" of a country it claimed uses human rights as a "foreign policy tool" while balking at scrutiny of its own actions. "How else can one explain that the United States—which has essentially legalized torture, applies capital punishment to minors, denies responsibility for war crimes and massive human rights violations in Iraq and Afghanistan, refuses to join a series of treaties in the sphere of human rights—distortedly comments on the situation in other countries?" it said.

Cardinal: Olympics chance for rights

ROME (AP)—The Beijing Olympics in August offer China the chance to improve its human rights record, Hong Kong Cardinal Joseph Zen said Wednesday. "It's a good opportunity for China to show that it has improved its regard for human rights," Zen said in an interview with Italy's RAI state TV. Zen, one of the most influential Roman Catholic leaders in Asia, added that he would like to see the Asian country become "one of the top nations that truly defend human rights and work for peace." The U.S. State Department said Tuesday in its annual report on human rights practices around the world that China still has chronic human rights problems despite rapid economic growth.

Honduran gang convicted in 2004 bus massacre

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP)—Two Honduran gang members were convicted Wednesday of opening fire on a bus and killing 28 people, and each were condemned to the country's maximum 40 years in jail. Juan Carlos Miranda, 22, and Darwin Alexis Ramirez, 23, were accused of being among about 10 gang members who shot up a public bus full of Christmas shoppers and commuters on Dec. 23, 2004, in the northern city of San Pedro Sula. They received largely symbolic sentences totaling 822 years each for killing 28 people, trying to kill another 10 people, being gang members and carrying an illegal weapon, according to prosecutor Cesar Alvarenga. Under Honduran law, 40 years is the maximum time that can be served.

Sheriff: Woman sat on toilet for 2 years

WICHITA, Kan. (AP)—Authorities are considering charges in the bizarre case of a woman who sat on her boyfriend's toilet for two years—so long that her body was stuck to the seat by the time the man finally called police.

It appeared the 35-year-old Ness City woman's skin had grown around the seat, said Ness County Sheriff Bryan Whipple. The woman initially refused emergency medical services but was finally convinced by responders and her boyfriend that she needed to be checked out at a hospital.

"We pried the toilet seat off with a pry bar and the seat went with her to the hospital," Whipple said. "The hospital removed it."

Whipple said investigators planned to present their report

Wednesday to the county attorney, who will determine whether any charges should be filed against the boyfriend.

"She was not glued. She was not tied. She was just physically stuck by her body," Whipple said. "It is hard to imagine. ... I still have a hard time imagining it myself."

Police declined to release the couple's names, but the boyfriend, Kory McFarren, agreed to be interviewed Wednesday by The Associated Press. He identified his girlfriend as Pam Babcock.

McFarren, 36, told investigators he took Babcock food and water and asked her every day to come out of the bathroom.

"And her reply would be, 'Maybe tomorrow,'" Whipple said. "According to him, she did not want to leave the bathroom."

McFarren told the AP that he wasn't to blame, and that it was solely Babcock's choice to remain in the bathroom.

"She is an adult; she made her own decision. It was my fault I should have gotten help for her sooner; I admit that. But after a while, you kind of get used to it," McFarren said.

Although authorities said they think Babcock was in the bathroom for two years, McFarren said he wasn't certain how long she stayed there. He said she had a phobia about leaving the room because of childhood beatings.

"It just kind of happened one day. She went in and had been in there a little while, the next time it was a little longer. Then she got it in her head she was going to stay - like it was a safe place for her," McFarren said.

But McFarren said Babcock moved around in the bathroom during that time, bathed and changed into the clothes he brought her. He said they conversed and had an otherwise normal relationship - except that it all happened in the bathroom.

McFarren, who works at an antique store, said he has been taking care of Babcock for the 16 years they have lived together.

McFarren called police on Feb. 27 to report that "there was something wrong with his girlfriend," Whipple said.

Police found Babcock clothed and sitting on the toilet, her sweat pants down to her mid-thigh. She was "somewhat disoriented," and her legs looked as if they had atrophied, Whipple said.

"She said that she didn't need any help, that she was OK and did not want to leave," he said.

She was reported in fair condition at a hospital in Wichita, about 150 miles southeast of Ness City. Whipple said she refused to cooperate with medical providers or law enforcement investigators.

McFarren said that his girlfriend has an infection in her legs that has damaged her nerves, and that she has no feeling in her legs. She may wind up in a wheelchair, he said.

Authorities said they did not know whether she was mentally or physically disabled.

The case has been the buzz of Ness City, said James Ellis, a neighbor.

"I don't think anybody can make any sense out of it," he said.

Ellis said he had known the woman since she was a child but that he had not seen her for at least six years.

He said she had a tough childhood after her mother died at a young age and apparently was usually kept inside the house as she grew up. At one time the woman worked for a long-term care facility, he said, but he did not know what kind of work she did there.

"It really doesn't surprise me," Ellis said. "What surprises me is somebody wasn't called in a bit earlier."

Woman tries to bring skeleton on plane

MUNICH, Germany (AP) -- A woman was stopped at Munich airport after baggage control handlers found the skeleton of her brother sealed in a plastic bag in her luggage, police said Wednesday. The 62-year-old woman and her 63-year-old friend, who both live in Italy, were hauled in by airport police Tuesday after a scan of the bag showed a human skull and other bones. The women were traveling to Italy from Brazil. It turned out, however, that the woman was simply trying to fulfill the last wish of her brother - who died 11 years ago in Sao Paulo, Brazil - to be buried in Italy. The travelers produced the appropriate papers from Brazilian authorities for the unusual transport, and were allowed to carry on their way to Naples - bones and all.

9 Hondas stolen in 24 hours in Yakima

YAKIMA, Wash. (AP) -- Yakima police took notice when 11 Hondas were stolen in a two-week period. Now they are investigating nine Honda thefts that occurred in a period of about 24 hours. The cars were taken Monday and Tuesday, and police say most were early to mid-1990s models. Police Capt. Greg B. Copeland says it's unusual to have so many vehicles of one type stolen in such a short period. Investigators believe at least some may be related to the arrest of a 25-year-old man late Monday. Police say numerous Honda parts were found at a home following the arrest, but two of the latest Honda thefts occurred after he was arrested. According to police there were an average of 2.3 car thefts a day last year in Yakima, population about 83,000.

Dolphin appears to guide whales to sea

WELLINGTON, New Zealand (AP)—Most days, Moko the bottlenosed dolphin swims playfully with humans at a New Zealand beach. But this week, it seems, Moko found his mojo. Witnesses described Wednesday how they saw the dolphin swim up to two stranded whales and guide them to safety.

Before Moko arrived, rescue workers had been working for more than an hour to get two pygmy sperm whales, a mother and her calf, back out to sea after they were stranded Monday off Mahia Beach, said Conservation Department worker Malcolm Smith.

But Smith said the whales re-stranded themselves four times on a sandbar slightly out to sea from the beach, about 300 miles northeast of the capital, Wellington. It looked likely they would have to be euthanized to prevent a prolonged death, he said.

"They kept getting disorien-tated and stranding again," said Smith, who was among the rescuers. "They obviously couldn't find their way back past (the sandbar) to the sea."

Then along came Moko, who approached the whales and appeared to lead them as they swam 200 yards along the beach and through a channel out to the open sea.

"Moko just came flying through the water and pushed in between us and the whales," Juanita Symes, another rescuer, told The Associated Press. "She got them to head toward the hill, where the channel is. It was an amazing experience."

Anton van Helden, a marine mammals expert at New Zealand's national museum, Te Papa Tongarewa, said the reports of Moko's rescue were "fantastic" but believable because the dolphins have "a great capacity for altruistic activities."

Vegas man paints car like police cruiser

Jessie Vigil's vehicle is seen at his home in Las Vegas, N.M. in March 2007. Vigil's black-and-white car sports a red-and-blue emergency bar across the top and the word "police" painted on the doors.

LAS VEGAS, N.M. (AP) -- Jessie Vigil's black-and-white car sports a red-and-blue emergency bar across the top and the word "police" painted on the doors. Vigil, however, isn't a cop. Law enforcement agencies say what he's done with his car isn't illegal as long as he doesn't act like a police officer.

He started decorating his 2007 Ford Mustang last summer to look like the police cruiser in the "Transformers" movie because his 7-year-old son, Thomas, was fond of the film.

"My intent was to re-create the movie car," said Vigil, a 35-year-

Honey drips out of Calif. family's walls

SAN MARINO, Calif. (AP)—The situation at the Stathatos house on Virginia Road is getting sticky. So many bees live in the walls of the stately Tudor home that honey drips out of the walls, discoloring the wallpaper in the dining room.

The bees had been good tenants, peacefully coexisting for years with the home's human residents, Helen and Jerry Stathatos.

But lately the house has become a hive of activity, with bees buzzing around an upstairs bedroom, said Dustin Mackey, a bee removal expert with Bee Specialist.

Mackey made a house call in late February to vacuum the busy insects from a window frame and seal the floor in the bedroom.

"You walk into the house and it smells sweet," Mackey said. "I felt like I was in a jar of honey."

Mackey said Jerry Stathatos said the bee problem had been going on for at least 20 years, but living in an apiary never bothered the family.

Calls Wednesday to Helen and Jerry Stathatos were not returned.

Mackey said Stathatos decided against removing the bees because it might require them to pull down several interior walls, where "thousands, maybe millions" of bees have taken up residence.

"They are making honey and we can't even get to it," Helen Stathatos told the San Gabriel Valley Tribune newspaper.

Just outside the front door, near a hole the bees use to enter the house, Mackey saw thousands of bees "just hanging in clumps."

"They've got the most beautiful garden you've ever seen, with flowers all around the house. It's the perfect environment for bees," said Mackey.

old disabled veteran from the war in Iraq. "When I came back from Iraq, I tried to spoil him. I wasn't the best dad before."

He said he called the district attorney's office beforehand and spoke to Chief Deputy District Attorney Joe Ulibarri, who tried to discourage his decorating scheme but couldn't find anything in the law that would stop Vigil as long as he didn't impersonate an officer.

Ulibarri said a state law prevents people from mimicking state police cars, which are painted black and white. But he also said the state police sell their old cars to private citizens without changing the colors.

"Are we violating our own law by not repainting them?" he asked.

He called the state law vague, and noted that normal state police cars aren't Mustangs.

"I don't think this guy has any intent to mimic a state police officer," Ulibarri said. "I'm not hearing that he is causing a problem and arresting people."

A close look shows Vigil's car isn't a police cruiser. Instead of the familiar slogan "To protect and serve," it carries a motto: "To punish and enslave" on the side. Instead of telling people to dial 911 for emergencies, the Mustang advises them to "dial 411 for theater information."

He originally marked his car, "Transformers police" but later changed it to just "police." He also added what appears to be a bar of emergency lights, but said they're not actual lights.

Vigil acknowledged people have mixed feelings about his car.

State police Capt. Craig Martin said the agency is "concerned for the safety of people who think he is an officer and think they may get help from him."

"People around town know who he is, but not those people on the interstate."

Researchers show off laser-guided robot

ATLANTA (AP)—The EL-E robot looks like something you'd see in a Hollywood sci-fi flick: It's got two lenses spaced together just like eyes and a slender 5 1/2-foot-tall body. It spurts out wacky catch phrases when it accomplishes its goals.

But unlike android movie stars, the EL-E isn't designed to behave like a human. Rather, its focus is interacting with us. It simply grabs stuff you point at with a laser.

"The entire world becomes a point and click interface. Objects become buttons. And if you point at one, the robot comes to grab it," said Charlie Kemp, the director of Georgia Tech's Center for Healthcare Robotics and the robot's designer. "It creates a clickable world."

The robot, which was unveiled Wednesday at an Amsterdam conference, will be tested this summer in a real-world setting involving patients with a degenerative disease. Its creators—from Georgia Tech and Emory universities—won't disclose the robot's cost, but there's hope it could be cheaper than service animals such as dogs or monkeys.

To command the EL-E, the user points a laser at something for a few seconds. The robot responds with a beep and then zeros in on the target. Once there, it lifts a mechanical arm and grabs the object. It begins the return trip when the laser is pointed at the user's feet, and it looks for a human face before handing over what it grabbed.

Kemp said engineers are often too focused on making robots behave like people, ignoring other ways they can interact.

"How can you make robots that are actually useful? That was bugging me," he said. "And it's a hard question to answer—that's why I'm happy with this. We made technical contributions as well as something that actually helps users."

The robot successfully fetches its target objects off the floor 90 percent of the time, researchers said.

This summer's test will involve patients with ALS, or Lou Gehrig's Disease, which shuts down nerve cells responsible for movement.

"It will give these folks at least a level of independence," said Dr. Jonathan Glass, director of the Emory ALS Center and a part of the team developing the robot. "You don't have to feed it, and you can train it to do anything you want to do."

Using a laser pointer, Hai Nguyen, a research student in Georgia Tech's Ph.D. program in Robotics, instructs the EL-E, a laser-directed robot, to pick up a cup at the Health Systems Institute in Atlanta, Friday, March 7, 2008.

Facebook app lets users send movie clips

By RYAN NAKASHIMA
AP BUSINESS WRITER

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Paramount Pictures will become the first major studio to make clips from thousands of its movies available for use on the Internet.

The unit of Viacom Inc. is teaming with Los Angeles-based developer FanRocket to launch the VooZoo application Monday on Facebook.

The service gives Facebook users access to footage from thousands of movies, ranging from "The Ten Commandments" to "Forrest Gump," to send to others on the popular social networking site.

"The short clips for a movie that you've already seen before helps you relive the moment," Paramount senior vice president of entertainment Derek Broes said.

The clips last from a few seconds to several minutes and cover the gamut from Eddie Murphy's guffaw in "Beverly Hills Cop" to Audrey Hepburn's pleas over her "no-name slob" cat in "Breakfast at Tiffany's."

The studio will market DVDs of the movies through a button that appears after each clip is played. It eventually wants to use the application to virally market upcoming releases.

For example, VooZoo is withholding clips from the "Indiana Jones" series until it works out a way to market the May 22 release of the latest installment, "Indiana Jones and the Kingdom of the Crystal Skull."

FanRocket founder Danny Kastner said he is aiming to get a few hundred thousand users within two months and added that the company is in talks with other Hollywood studios to package their titles on VooZoo.

That could take time, however, since Paramount staffers needed more than a year to select clips from the archive and tag them with search terms.

Paramount said it has not set revenue goals for the new venture.

"My benchmark for success is that people are joining and sending," Broes said.

Acer to launch six-speaker movie laptop

NEW YORK (AP)—Acer Inc., the Taiwanese computer maker that bought Gateway last year, said on Tuesday that it now aims to take laptop users as close as they can get to the high-definition home theater experience.

The top model of the new "Gemstone blue" line of laptops has a screen with the same resolution as an a top-of-the-line HDTV, at 1,920 pixels by 1,080 pixels, and will have six speakers, including a subwoofer, for so-called "5.1" surround sound.

The computer will go on sale next month in the U.S. for $1,999. A model with three speakers and a smaller screen (but still HD resolution) will cost $1,699. Both will have built-in Blu-ray disc drives.

The computer industry has long had its set of standard screen resolutions, while the consumer electronics industry has standardized on different ones. Acer's Blue line effectively adopts the consumer-electronics standard, which means that many movies and all HD TV shows will fill the screen, without black bars.

Acer said the laptops would be the first with 1,920-by-1,080 screens, and the top model is the first laptop with six speakers.

Q: If I try to install my old copy of Office XP in Windows Vista, will I run into any prohibitions or technical problems?

A: Microsoft says every version of its productivity suite since Office 2000 is "supported" in Vista, but Office 2000 and XP won't get any bug-fix updates for problems they experience in Vista.

In other words, you're on your own. Multiple readers have told me they've had no issues running Office XP in Vista, so you should be fine running it on the new computer.

Installing it may be trickier. Office XP's "product activation" feature, intended to stop people from using Office without paying, will notice when your copy has been put on a new machine and ask you to reactivate it. Call the phone number listed on the screen; after you explain to a Microsoft representative that you've removed the copy from the old machine, you should get a new activation code.

This approach won't work with an OEM (original equipment manufacturer) copy that the old computer's vendor bundled with the machine. Those are only licensed for use on a single PC. If you'd rather not pay Microsoft for a newer version of Office, try the free, open-source OpenOffice (openoffice.org) or, if you have a broadband connection, the free Web-based productivity suites offered by Google (docs.google.com) and Zoho (zoho.com).

Q: One of Apple's software updates won't install—Mac OS X says it couldn't verify it. Redoing the install through Software Update didn't help.

A: If a file gets corrupted on its way to your machine, Software Update may not think to download it again. If that happens, you can get a fresh copy from Apple's Web site (apple.com/support/downloads); once it's downloaded, double-click the file to start installing the update.

TiVo, YouTube to deliver videos to TVs

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—TiVo users will be able to watch YouTube clips on their televisions by year's end, TiVo Inc. said Wednesday.

That's the latest move by YouTube to reach beyond the Web's regular boundaries. Fans of the popular online video provider can view its videos on their cell phones and Apple TV, a box that streams movies from people's computers to their TV.

Now TiVo users with a broadband Internet connection and a TiVo Series3 box, which includes the high-definition model, will be able to search, browse and watch YouTube videos directly on their TVs.

Each month, 66 million viewers watch about 2.6 billion videos on YouTube, according to the latest data by Nielsen Online. That's 57 percent the 116.7 million monthly online video viewers.

YouTube is owned by Google Inc., which paid $1.76 billion for the company in November 2006. The site has not yet produced significant profits.

Japan investigates possible iPod defect

TOKYO (AP)—Japan is investigating a possible defect in Apple Inc.'s iPod after one of the popular digital music players reportedly shot out sparks while recharging, a government official said Wednesday. An official at the trade and economy ministry, which oversees product problems, said a defect is suspected in the lithium-ion battery in the iPod Nano, model number MA099J/A. He spoke on customary condition of anonymity, saying he is reiterating a ministry position. The problem surfaced in January in Kanagawa Prefecture southwest of Tokyo, and Apple reported the problem to the ministry in March. No one was injured, the official said. Other details weren't available. Apple Japan did not contest the ministry statement but declined further comment. Nano players are sold all over the world, and it was still unclear where else besides Japan the suspected model was sold, said Masayoshi Suzuki, an Apple spokesman in Tokyo.

Tubera, Alovera triumph in singing contest

Seven-year-old Erika Tubera and 12-year-old Mary Antoinette Alovera blew away the competition to bag the championship trophies in the recently held Saipan Singing Superstars competition, held Friday last week at the Saipan Grand Hotel's Club V.

Tubera, a student of the Garapan Elementary School, wowed the judges with her rendition of the Whitney Houston classic One Moment in Time to win first place in the 4-to-9-years-old category. She won for herself the $500 grand prize and a brand new cell phone from PTI.

Alovera, of the Grace Christian Academy, swept the competition in the 10-to-13-years-old category with an astonishing rendition of I Have Nothing, winning for herself $500 and a brand new cell phone from PTI.

There were a total of three grand finalists for each category.

Miguel Andre Aninon, 8, of Mount Carmel School, took home the second prize trophy in the 4-9 category with Yesterday's Dream, winning $300 and a brand new cell phone from PTI.

Eight-year-old Lizelle Salanga of Koblerville Elementary School was in third place, singing Power of Love to take home $200 and a cell phone, also from PTI.

In the 10-13 category, 12-year-old Matthew Lopez of the San Vicente Elementary School secured for himself the second place spot with the Michael Bolton staple How am I Supposed to Live Without You. He won $300 and a cell phone.

Shandel Cayabyab, 10, from Garapan Elementary School, was in third place with her rendition of Follow Your Dream. She won $200 and a cell phone.

These six grand finalists were culled from scores of contestants that participated in the preliminaries that were held during the Friday Food Fair at the Saipan Grand Hotel.

'American Idol' axes first finalist

NEW YORK (AP)—A juicy backstory wasn't enough to keep David Hernandez on "American Idol." The 24-year-old ex-stripper from Glendale, Ariz., was dismissed Wednesday, leaving 11 aspiring singers to vie for the "Idol" title and a record contract.

"Honestly, things happen for a reason," Hernandez said before leaving the stage. "I think we all have a plan.... This isn't it for me."

Hernandez, who sang the Beatles' "I Saw Her Standing There," made headlines last week after it was revealed to The Associated Press that he worked as a stripper at a Phoenix club with a "mostly male" clientele.

Kristy Lee Cook, a 24-year-old from Selma, Ore., and Syesha Mercado, a 21-year-old from Sarasota, Fla., rounded out the bottom three vote-getters.

Finalists had the opportunity to perform classics from the John Lennon-Paul McCartney songbook this week. The show's producers recently got permission to use songs belonging to Sony/ATV Music Publishing, a company formed by Sony and Michael Jackson.

The standouts were Carly Smithson ("Come Together"), Brooke White ("Let It Be"), David Cook ("Eleanor Rigby") and Chikezie ("She's A Woman").

David Archuleta, whose cover of Lennon's "Imagine" drew heaps of praise two weeks ago, showed that he's merely mortal when he flubbed the lyrics to "We Can Work It Out." That didn't fly with Cowell, who called the 17-year-old's performance "a mess."

Wednesday's show also featured a performance by season-five finalist Katharine McPhee and musician David Foster (on the piano).

Little 'Idol,' big voice: Malubay, baby

By DAMIAN GRASS
ASSOCIATED PRESS WRITER

MIRAMAR, Fla. (AP)—When Ramiele Malubay takes the stage on "American Idol," the 20-year-old with punkish blond streaks in her dark hair comes off as bubbly, polished and even a little edgy. That's not exactly the young woman her friends and family say was too shy to sing "Happy Birthday" a few months ago.

When her parents tried to get her to sing a karaoke version at high school friend Arthur "A.J."

Ke's birthday bash, the 20-year-old Malubay just hid in the corner and rolled her eyes.

"Since it was a really cheap karaoke machine, a bunch of the words were spelled wrong," Ke said. "But once she was up there, we were all cracking up, and we all ended up having a great time."

And if it wasn't for her father's prodding, the diminutive Filipino-American singer with the big voice probably wouldn't have auditioned a second time for "American Idol"—which means she wouldn't be standing among the final 12 contestants on the top-rated Fox TV show. She was rejected in the initial stage last year and balked at going back.

"I think she was lacking a bit of that confidence and didn't want the people close to her expect too much from her," neighbor Isidra Yokose said Tuesday night at the lobby of Hilton Garden Inn in Miramar, where family and friends have been meeting every week to watch the show, cheer for Malubay—and furiously text in votes on their cell phones, of course.

"She is so incredibly special to us and to the rest of the Filipino community," added family friend Geny Panaligan-Ke, who organizes the "Watch 'N Vote 4 Ramiele" gatherings.

"I don't know where she gets it, but she definitely has the talent, the potential and the confidence to make it," Yokose said. "We are so proud of her, and we have all the faith in the world that she will make it big."

Before her good looks, tiny stature—she's 4-foot-11—and big voice made her a fan favorite, Malubay worked part-time as a waitress at a sushi restaurant in suburban Fort Lauderdale, where she grew up with her younger sister and her Filipino parents. The family moved to the United States from Saudi Arabia when she was 5.

She's aware of the comparisons to fellow Filipino Jasmine Trias, who finished third in the show's third season. But she wants to top that.

"First Filipino 'American Idol,' that's kind of still a surreal reach," Malubay said in an early "Idol" interview. "I don't want to be ahead of myself. I don't want it to go fast. I want it to just come as it does. I'm really excited to just get onstage and show everybody what I can do."

Malubay—pronounced "mah-loo-BYE"—also became the focus of a minor "Idol" scandal this season when Facebook photos of her goofing off with friends in provocative poses were made public. She doesn't understand the fuss.

"It's not a big deal," she wrote on a MySpace blog. "For me, those photos are not racy. But if you think they are, it's OK, that's your opinion. ... It has nothing to do with the show, which is looking for the next singing superstar and not looking for the perfect human."

Razor-tongued "Idol" judge Simon Cowell wasn't convinced she could get far at first, saying after her audition that she reminded him of a "hotel singer." But judge Randy Jackson disagreed, telling her "You definitely got a big voice for a very cute, smaller girl."

Since then, Cowell has acknowledged to feeling differently after watching her perform.

"I knew that Simon would come around," Panaligan-Ke said. "I knew she was going to impress them."

But Cowell came full circle on Tuesday, saying he was "bored to tears" by Malubay's version of the Beatles' "In My Life."

Charles, Camilla tour Marley museum

KINGSTON, Jamaica (AP)—Prince Charles and wife Camilla joined a group of Rastafarian musicians Wednesday for a drum session outside the old home of reggae great Bob Marley.

On a Caribbean tour to promote environmental protection, the royal couple were led through the home - now a museum honoring the late singer - by Marley's widow, Rita, and sons Robert and Rohan.

Charles and Camilla viewed memorabilia such as tour photos and a Gibson guitar favored by the singer, who rose to international stardom before dying of cancer at 36.

Earlier Wednesday, hundreds of people jostled each other for a glimpse of the British royals during a visit to an impoverished community. Charles chatted with townspeople and planted a seedling at a community center in Rose Town, where his Foundation for the Built Environment is helping with revitalization efforts.

"It's quite a spectacle," local resident Dale Bent said of the touring royals.

The prince also inspected an honor guard in the capital.

Gov. General Kenneth Hall and British High Commissioner Jeremy Cresswell accompanied the royals, who are nearing the close of a five-island tour aboard a 246-foot yacht that boasts a hot tub, gym and 24-member crew.

Jury to deliberate Ritter death lawsuit

GLENDALE, Calif. (AP)—Attorneys in the wrongful-death lawsuit against John Ritter's doctors gave jurors drastically different views Wednesday on whether anything could have been done to save the actor on the night he died.

A proper diagnosis would have led to immediate emergency surgery and saved Ritter's life, family attorney Moses Lebovits said in closing arguments.

But lawyers for the two doctors being sued for $67 million said they acted properly and insisted there was no way Ritter could have survived.

"We're not saying John Ritter was negligent and caused his own death," said attorney Stephen C. Fraser, addressing claims that Ritter failed to seek adequate medical care long before he was stricken.

"There was nothing that could have been done to prevent John Ritter from having an aortic dissection. He didn't have it because he failed to do follow-up or didn't take his medication," Fraser said.

The jury was to begin deliberations Thursday.

Ritter died in 2003 at Providence St. Joseph Medical Center in Burbank after becoming ill while working on his hit TV show "8 Simple Rules ... for Dating My Teenage Daughter." The 54-year-old actor was treated for a heart attack but actually died of a torn aorta.

The plaintiffs claim that Dr. Joseph Lee, the cardiologist who was summoned to the hospital that night, mishandled the case. They also claim that Dr. Matthew Lotysch, a radiologist, failed to adequately warn Ritter of a purportedly enlarged aorta after doing a body scan on the actor two years earlier.

Eight other medical personnel and the hospital have settled lawsuits. Ritter's widow, Amy Yasbeck, and his four children received $14 million from those cases.

Fraser argued that his client, Lotysch, and Lee are experienced, highly regarded doctors who did the best they could under the circumstances.

"This was a rare presentation of a rare disease," Fraser said. "Before Dr. Lee got to the hospital, Mr. Ritter had been diagnosed (with a heart attack)."

Lee's lawyer, John McCurdy, said: "Dr. Lee was reasonable in believing he had a patient who was crashing and could die. ... He had to make a decision and he didn't have a lot of time to make it."

Lebovits said there was time to get a surgical team together and try to save Ritter's life, and time to get a chest X-ray that might have revealed the torn aorta.

"There was no need to rush," he said. "You could get that X-ray done and they didn't do it. They rushed to make the wrong diagnosis."

"You can't run away from the reality that John Ritter did not have to die," he concluded.

Testimony in the trial showed that a chest X-ray was ordered as soon as Ritter arrived at the emergency room but for unknown reasons was never done. Lee was called in later in the evening after Ritter took a turn for the worse and was already diagnosed as having a heart attack.

Plaintiffs' witnesses testified that a decision to conduct a balloon angioplasty was wrong.

Lebovits said that had Ritter been properly diagnosed: "He would have had surgery. He would have been back at work. He would have survived with his humor and good wit and been entertaining us all."

At one point, Ritter's widow collapsed in tears as Lebovits spoke of her loss.

"Amy's got to go to the next step alone," he said. "She's lost the love and affection. She's lost the one who was her soul mate."

Crystal looks 'mahvelous' in pinstripes

AP BASEBALL WRITER

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) -- Billy Crystal came prepared. Black maple bat in hand, the New York Yankees newcomer brought a well-worn glove with his name neatly stitched on the side, too.

The hitting and fielding part, the comedian felt confident about. It was the drug test that had him worried.

"I'm supposed to bring blood and urine to the umpire tomorrow," he kidded Wednesday. "I might test positive for Maalox."

Quite a 60th birthday present for the actor, director, Oscar host and lifelong Yankees fan: A chance to play in an exhibition game Thursday at Legends Field.

Crystal certainly looked the part during his day-before workout. He kept the jokes to a minimum, made contact on all 52 swings against batting practice pitcher Tino Martinez and kept up with Derek Jeter in jogging drills.

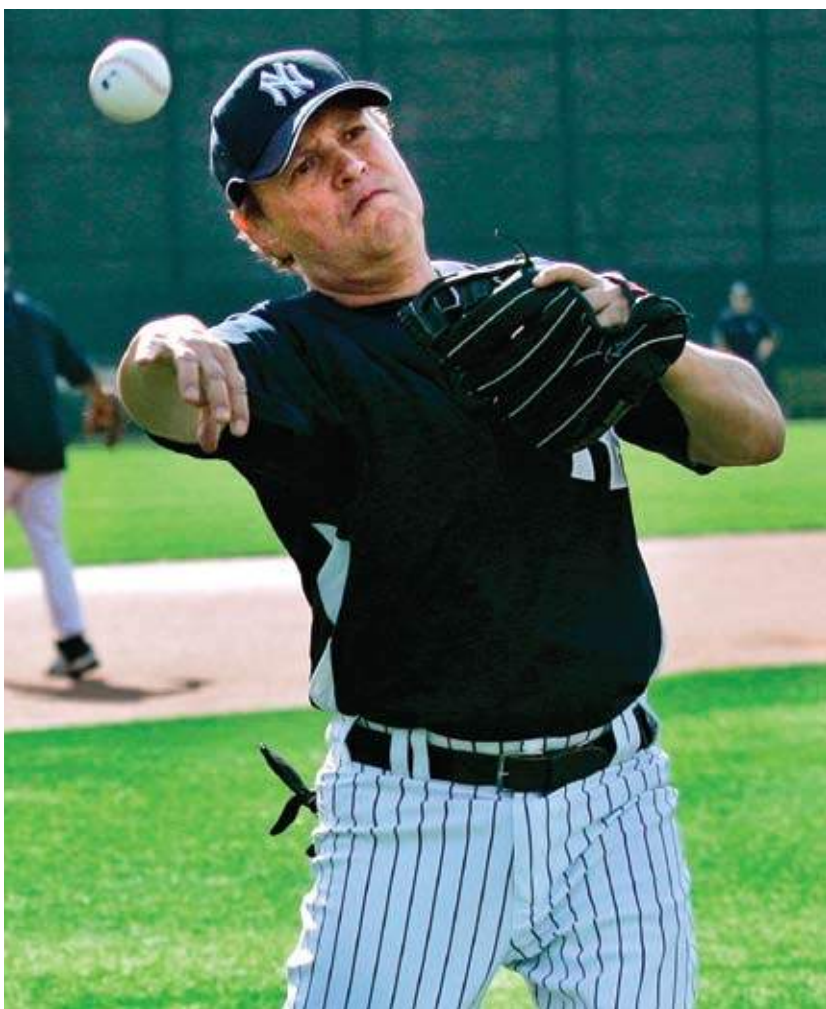

"He did fine," Jeter said. "He did a good job."

Crystal will become the latest celebrity to play in a spring training game, joining the likes of Garth Brooks, Tom Selleck and Bruce Hornsby.

Exactly what Crystal will do against Pittsburgh remains a mystery. He'll get to swing, but it's unclear if the former high school infielder will need his black Rawlings mitt.

Asked by a fan what position he'll play, Crystal quipped: "DH - designated Hebrew."

He did, however, have something

homer that beat the Yankees in Game 7 of the 1960 World Series.

received his No. 60 jersey from manager Joe Girardi.

Spotting newly elected Hall of Famer Goose Gossage in the clubhouse, Crystal made a beeline to the reliever and offered congratulations.

While a few tradition-laden critics complained that Crystal's appearance was a stunt that somehow offended baseball, Gossage said he had no problems.

"It doesn't bother me," the hard-throwing Goose said. "Of course, if I pitched to him, I'd flip him. I'd knock him down. And that would be the end of it."

Martinez, prodded by Jeter, playfully tossed a pitch behind Crystal's helmet during BP. Crystal was equal to the moment, walking toward the mound and pointing his bat.

Crystal ended the 90-minute session with his best swing of the afternoon. The righty lined what would've been a double down the left-field line, then lingered a few extra minutes talking with Triple-A hitting coach Butch Wynegar about mechanics.

"I was surprised. You could tell he's been working at it," Martinez said.

Crystal spent a lot of time practicing with Reggie Smith. The former star trained the actors to hit for "61," the HBO project that Crystal directed.

"Entertainment Tonight" and TV Guide cameras followed Crystal from the main field to a back diamond, and his wife, Janice, also shot her own video.

"He hasn't been too nervous," she said. "Naturally, when he steps in there and they're throwing 90 mph fastballs, that's a little different."

Crystal was a favorite of former Yankees manager Joe Torre and became something of a pinstripe mascot, once keeping them loose by taking infield with them before a World Series game.

Crystal signed a one-day minor league contract when he arrived at Legends Field, met with Girardi and then walked directly to his locker. Yankees prospect Mark Melancon previously occupied the cubicle.

"It's beyond belief," Crystal said. "But I didn't want to come in and step on anyone's toes. People have to get ready for the season."

Crystal was the third person in the clubhouse wearing No. 60. The number also belongs to special pitching instructor Rich Monteleone and young infielder Cody Ransom, who will switch to No. 67 for the Pirates game.

In the majors, players often give some sort of gift - maybe a Rolex - to someone who yields their number.

Commissioner Bud Selig approved this appearance and the Pirates sounded fine with Crystal's guest shot.

"He's been a big ambassador for baseball," Pittsburgh manager John Russell said. "It's a kid's game at heart and he has loved it since he was a kid. I have no qualms about it whatsoever."

Nor does lefty Paul Maholm, scheduled to start for the Pirates.

"It's a no-win situation for me," he said, smiling. "I'm supposed to get the guy out. If he gets a hit off me, though, I might to have hang 'em up after the game."

'Girls Gone Wild' founder enters plea

PANAMA CITY, Fla. (AP)—“Girls Gone Wild” video empire founder Joe Francis pleaded no contest to child abuse and prostitution charges Wednesday under an agreement allowing him to go free after nearly a year in jail.

Francis, 34, returned to Florida after posting a $1.5 million bond this week in Nevada, where he is awaiting trial for tax fraud. The hearing in Bay County state court resolved his 2003 criminal case involving the filming of under-aged girls during spring break on Panama City Beach.

“I have never committed any crime. I pleaded guilty just to get out of jail,” a defiant Francis said after the Bay County state court hearing. “A few corrupt individuals were able to keep an innocent man in jail for 11 months.”

Francis makes an estimated $29 million a year on videos of young women in sexually provocative situations.

He pleaded no contest to one count of felony child abuse and two counts of misdemeanor prostitution. He also pleaded no contest to two additional child abuse counts on behalf of his company, Mantra Films.

The charges were all that remained out of an original 73-count indictment brought after Bay County law officers raided Francis' hotel rooms and corporate jet in 2003. He also pleaded guilty in a 2007 case for having contraband - sleeping pills and cash - in the Bay County Jail.

Judge Deede Costello sentenced Francis to 339 days on Wednesday, the time he has already served in Florida and Nevada. Costello also ordered Francis to pay more than $60,000 in fines, court costs and restitution to the county.

Francis also agreed that his company would not conduct any filming between Escambia and Jackson Counties in Florida for the next three years.

Miami defense attorney Roy Black brokered the plea agreement.

Francis believed the women his company filmed in 2003 were over 18 because they signed agreements stating they were of legal age, Black said.

“But it makes no difference under Florida law, they still committed a crime,” Black said. “I understand why Joe is so upset. In his business, you can be doing your job and go to jail for 11 months.”

Black and Francis' other attorneys have said the 2003 raid was retribution against Francis by Bay County officials who unsuccessfully tried to block his company from filming spring break that year.

A Bay County federal judge ordered Francis, who had remained free on bond since 2003, back into custody last year after settlement agreements in a civil case brought by some of the under-aged girls filmed by his company. Lawyers for the women said they were verbally abused by Francis and threatened during closed-door negotiations.

Bay County officials then revoked Francis' bond in the 2003 criminal case when jail guards said he tried to bribe them with cash for bottled water to swallow sleeping pills. Federal officials ordered Francis transported to Reno, Nev., pending trial there.

Francis stayed in Nevada in part because authorities in Bay County wouldn't allow bail in the case there. A federal judge in Nevada said the Florida bail issue had to be resolved first.

Francis said plea agreement negotiations are under way in the Nevada case and he hopes to resolve them soon.

“I'm going to go back to making videos, this afternoon,” he said.

Black's kung fu fighting with 'Panda'

LAS VEGAS (AP)—The last thing the martial-arts fans behind “Kung Fu Panda” wanted to do was make fun of the genre they were re-imagining for the animated world.

So while their leading guy is a tubby, klutzy panda with Jack Black's voice, the filmmakers have delivered a real kung fu movie in the guise of a cartoon comedy.

Directors Mark Osborne and ShoWest, an annual convention of theater owners.

“Everybody on the crew was a big martial-arts movie fan,” Stevenson said. “That was one of the reasons we didn't want to do a parody, because we actually love those movies. They're great movies. They're sort of like Westerns, these great archetypal tales of good and evil and great emotion and heroism. So we wanted to hon-

Fate lands the roly-poly panda an unexpected gig: He is declared the Dragon Warrior, destined to battle the evil snow leopard Tai Lung (Ian McShane), who has escaped from a prison fortress seeking vengeance against his former martial-arts master Shifu (Dustin Hoffman).

Placed under the tutelage of the dubious Shifu, Po trains alongside five true kung fu masters: Jolie's Tigress, Chan's Monkey, Liu's Viper, Seth Rogen's Mantis and David Cross' Crane.

While the movie is loaded with slapstick and wisecracks, the spirit is true to martial-arts epics that inspired the filmmakers, among them “Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon,” “Hero” and “House of Flying Daggers.”

The fight scenes are exaggerated for the animated world, but they are real action sequences, intense and often fierce. Even voice star Chan, one of Hollywood's top martial-arts figures, was impressed.

“We thought early on about asking him to help consult and help us with our action, but he really deals with the physical world. He deals with bodies and props, so the virtual world was really foreign to him,” Osborne said.

“We kind of showed him some of our action when we recorded him, and he was really stunned by it. He was like, ‘Wow, this is cool. You're doing stuff that we can't ever do.’ I think it was really fun for him to see something that was so different but really a tribute at the same time to real kung fu. ... He may have been saying that for our benefit, but he was very, very kind.”

or that, not spoof it.”

Due in theaters June 6, “Kung Fu Panda” is the latest computer-generated production from DreamWorks Animation, whose films include the “Shrek” flicks, “Madagascar” and “Over the Hedge.”

Black provides the voice of Po, a panda in ancient China who idolizes the land's kung fu heroes but is stuck toiling in his family's noodle shop.

This animated image released by DreamWorks Animation shows a scene from “Kung Fu Panda.” AP

John Stevenson said they intended their panda hero and his comrades—including a tiger (Angelina Jolie), a viper (Lucy Liu) and a monkey (Jackie Chan)—to be the animal-world equivalent of the Asian action warriors they admire.

“With the title, it would be easy to expect maybe a parody of kung fu films,” Stevenson said after a screening of “Kung Fu Panda” Tuesday night at

'Hills' villain gets column in Radar mag

NEW YORK (AP)—If you've got a problem, yo—Spencer Pratt will solve it.

Pratt, who torments Lauren Conrad on "The Hills," is getting his own advice column in Radar magazine. Pratt and his squeeze, aspiring pop star Heidi Montag, are Conrad's archnemeses on the popular MTV reality show, which returns with all-new episodes March 24.

Pratt's new column—titled "YO SPENCER!"—will debut in Radar's April issue, on newsstands March 25, the magazine announced Wednesday.

"Spencer is never afraid to speak his mind," Radar editor Maer Roshan said in a statement. "When asking for advice, it's good to have someone who will be brutally honest with you, and tell it like it is."

The magazine featured Pratt, 24, in a Q&A in its November 2007 issue.

'Good Time' puts country's Jackson on top

By RANDY LEWIS
© 2008, LOS ANGELES TIMES

Alan Jackson has reason to sing the title track from his new "Good Time" album: It enters the national sales chart at No. 1 this week, the Georgia native's fourth collection to top the pop as well as the country rankings.

Following stylistic departures with the gospel "Precious Memories" and his collaboration with Alison Krauss, "Like Red on a Rose," "Good Time" returns Jackson to his traditional sound.

"Like Red on a Rose" debuted at No. 4 in 2006, even though it sold better—149,000 copies—during its first week in stores than "Good Time," which sold 119,000.

The biggest surprise addition to the Top 10 this week is Flogging Molly's "Float," the Los Angeles-based, Irish-rooted rock band's sixth album. It enters the chart at No. 4 on sales of 48,000, edging past the Black Crowes' "Warpaint," which sold 46,000 and lands at No. 5. Flogging Molly's previous album, "Whiskey on a Sunday," posted first-week sales of 14,000 and peaked at No. 67, according to Billboard.

The only other Top 20 debut is Michael McDonald's "Soul Speak," which enters at No. 12 with sales of 28,000, according to the Nielsen SoundScan retail sales monitoring service.

Last 'Harry Potter' book becomes 2 films

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Harry Potter was the center of seven novels, but he'll star in eight films. The final book in the wildly successful series will be made into two films, the Los Angeles Times reported Wednesday.

Producers are expected to announce Thursday that J.K. Rowling's last "Potter" installment, "Harry Potter and the Deathly Hallows," will be split into two parts on the big screen. The first film is slated for release in November 2010, with part two following in May 2011.

"It was born out of purely creative reasons," producer David Heyman told the Times. "Unlike every other book, you cannot remove elements of this book."

The two final "Potter" films will be shot concurrently, much like the blockbuster trilogy based on J.R.R. Tolkien's epic fantasy novel "The Lord of the Rings."

Another famous Tolkien tome, "The Hobbit," is also being split into two live-action movies set for back-to-back shooting to begin next year.

Filming on the sixth "Potter" flick, "Harry Potter and the Half-Blood Prince," began in September.

"It's been brilliant," said star Daniel Radcliffe. "It's also, I think, the funniest of the films so far."

The "Potter" film franchise has pulled in $4.5 billion at the worldwide box office.

Mariah fills in for sick Janet on 'SNL'

NEW YORK (AP)—"Saturday Night Live" has replaced a flu-ridden Janet Jackson with another diva: Mariah Carey. Carey, 37, will fill in for Jackson on the March 15 "SNL" telecast, NBC announced Wednesday.

Jackson, 41, was scheduled to perform live Saturday night in support of her latest album, "Discipline," which was released last month. The singer's publicist, Patti Webster, said Tuesday she dropped out because she has the flu and "needs some time to get better."

Carey's latest album, EMC2, arrives April 15.

Savings plan for parents is better late than never

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
UNIVERSAL PRESS SYNDICATE

DEAR ABBY: I'm 26 and concerned about my parents' future. They are in their late 40s and have absolutely nothing saved for retirement. Dad has a physically demanding job and won't be able to do it forever, and they are currently in debt up to their ears.

There are six kids in our family. I appreciate the fact that my parents are blowing off some steam when it comes to spending money, since they were unable to do it while we were all younger. However, I feel it's time they look at the big picture.

If something was to happen to Dad or he was unable to work, they'd lose everything. At this point, they will be unable to pay for any of their own expenses when they're older, and my siblings and I don't have money to support them. Our youngest brother still lives at home and is adopting the same spending habits as Mom and Dad.

How would you recommend we speak to our parents? They tend to be sensitive about these matters. Do you know of any articles or books we could reference when speaking to them?

—PENNYWISE IN ST. PETE, FLA.

DEAR PENNYWISE: Assuming that you and your four adult siblings are equally concerned about your parents' welfare, you should approach them as a group. It's still not too late for them to start saving and investing for their retirement years. And you and the others could help them by offering to match what they save each month. Even a small amount adds up.

If the five of you each put in $20 a month ($100), and your parents put in $100, at the end of a year they would have $2,400. By the time your father was ready to retire in 20 years, they'd have some serious money put away—not counting any increase in the value of their investments.

The U.S. General Services Administration Federal Citizen Information Center offers free information that could help you. Log on to www.pueblo.gsa.gov and look under the heading "Retirement Planning" in the "Money" section. You'll find lots of good advice, and you can even order free and low-cost booklets on saving and investing and much more. Or call (888) 8-Pueblo ((888) 878-3256) for a free Consumer Information Catalog. Also check your local library.

Your parents may or may not be receptive to this idea. However, if you turn the matching money into a "game," they'll be more likely to go for it. Good luck.

DEAR ABBY: Last year, against the advice of my friends and family, I forgave my ex-boyfriend. He swore he loved me and wanted to spend the rest of his life with me. I let him back into my life and let him talk to me about marriage and the future.

Within a few months he was up to his old tricks again, chasing other women, so I had to send him packing.

How do I forgive myself for being so stupid? I believed he loved me, and I am furious with myself for falling for his charm and his lies. My family isn't being very supportive because they didn't want me to reconcile. Please help me.

—FOOLED ME TWICE IN COLUMBUS, OHIO

DEAR FOOLED: Please stop beating yourself up. You're an optimistic person who believed in second chances, and your ex-boyfriend abused your trust.

Now that you understand he is incapable of change, it's time to learn from this experience and go on with your life. We learn more from our mistakes than our successes—and the lesson you will take from this is to draw the line sooner if you notice a person's words don't match his deeds.

HBO picks up 'No. 1 Ladies' Detective Agency'

HBO has picked up a television series based on Alexander McCall Smith's book "The No. 1 Ladies' Detective Agency" and its popular sequels, which relate the adventures of Precious Ramotswa, a no-nonsense investigator who runs a detective agency in Botswana.

A two-hour pilot, starring Jill Scott ("Tyler Perry's Why Did I Get Married?"), recently was filmed on location in Botswana, directed by Anthony Minghella, who co-wrote the script with Richard Curtis. HBO, in partnership with the Weinstein Co. and the BBC, ordered 13 additional one-hour episodes of the series, which will begin filming this summer. (Los Angeles Times)

Rockets top Hawks for 20th straight win

ATLANTA (AP)—The Houston Rockets became the third team in NBA history to win 20 consecutive games, tying for the league's second-longest winning streak with an 83-75 victory over the Atlanta Hawks on Wednesday night.

The Rockets joined the 1971-72 Los Angeles Lakers (33 straight) and 1970-71 Milwaukee Bucks (20) as the only teams to win 20 or more in a row.

Tracy McGrady scored 21 of his 28 points in the second half and Shane Battier had 15 points as Houston struggled to preserve their winning streak. They were held to their lowest first-half total during the span and trailed 33-32 at halftime.

A basket by Atlanta's Marvin Williams with 5 seconds left in the game ended the Rockets' streak of 10 straight wins by 10 or more points. Joe Johnson led the Hawks with 28 points, and Josh Smith had 16 points and a career-high 22 rebounds.

With the Rockets leading 71-70 with 5 minutes remaining, McGrady scored five points in Houston's 10-0 run to take control.

Houston led 59-57 at the end of the third quarter, but Atlanta's Zaza Pachulia opened the fourth with two free throws. Minutes later, he was called for a technical foul after arguing an offensive foul. Battier made the free throw to give the Rockets a 66-62 lead.

Atlanta closed to 71-70 when Chuck Hayes and Luis Scola scored on back-to-back baskets.

After Smith was denied inside, McGrady stretched the lead to 77-70 with a jumper which bounced twice on the rim before falling through the net. McGrady added a 3-pointer with 1:53 left for an 81-70 lead to cap the 10-0 run.

Houston allowed only 89.3 points per game during its 19 straight wins and it set a low scoring pace against the Hawks, who responded to the challenge with strong defense.

McGrady made only two of 10 shots from the field and three of six free throws in the first half as the Rockets shot only 27.9 percent from the field.

Despite a combined 31 rebounds by Smith and Al Horford, the Rockets held a 56-52 edge on the boards and an 18-15 advantage in second-chance points.

Houston has held two straight opponents to 75 or fewer points, following a 91-73 win over New Jersey on Monday.

Nets 104, Cavaliers 99

At East Rutherford, New Jersey, Richard Jefferson scored 24 points, and New Jersey overcame LeBron James' 42 points to hold off Cleveland and snap a six-game losing streak.

Bostjan Nachbar added 21 points and Devin Harris had 19, including three buckets in the last four-plus minutes after Cleveland had cut a 19-point lead to one. °E

Magic 110, Clippers 88

At Orlando, Florida, Dwight Howard had his league-leading 57th double-double of the season with 22 points and 13 rebounds for the Orlando, which improved to 24-0 this season when holding teams under 95 points.

Knicks 91, Heat 88

At Miami, Jamal Crawford scored 23 points, and New York wasted most of a 14-point fourth-quarter lead before beating the Miami and snapping a seven-game losing streak.

The Heat lost for the 33rd time in 36 games and extended the NBA's worst record to 11-52. Ricky Davis led Miami with 27 points.

Celtics 111, SuperSonics 82

At Boston, Kevin Garnett and Ray Allen each scored 18 points to lift Boston to a 10th straight victory. Paul Pierce added 14 points and 11 assists for Boston, which improved to 12-0 at home against the Western Conference.

Kevin Durant scored 16 points for Seattle, which dropped its sixth straight.

76ers 83, Pistons 82

At Auburn Hills, Michigan, Andre Iguodala scored 22 points and Philadelphia didn't score in the final 2:27, but won when Chauncey Billups' jumper over Rodney Carney bounced off the rim as time expired.

Carney scored 16 points for Philadelphia, and Samuel Dalembert grabbed 15 rebounds.

Rasheed Wallace had 17 points for Detroit, while Antonio McDyess added 14 points and 11 rebounds.

Hornets 100, Spurs 75

At New Orleans, Chris Paul had 26 points and 17 assists to help New Orleans take a convincing victory over Southwest Division-leading San Antonio.

David West, returning from an ankle injury that sidelined him for three games, had 29 points and 10 rebounds as New Orleans pulled within a half-game of the division lead behind the Spurs and Houston Rockets.

Tim Duncan had 24 points and 11 rebounds for San Antonio, which shot only 2-of-18 from 3-point range and a dreadful 7-of-17 on free throws.

Jazz 114, Bucks 110

At Milwaukee, Carlos Boozer had a go-ahead layup with 46.7 seconds and Utah narrowly avoided another surprising road loss. Deron Williams led Utah with 26 points and 13 assists, his ninth straight double-double.

Charlie Villanueva and Michael Redd scored 26 points each to lead Milwaukee, which nearly pulled out a victory thanks to Charlie Bell's season high five 3-pointers that allowed Milwaukee to take a 99-89 lead.

Mavericks 118, Bobcats 93

At Dallas, Dirk Nowitzki scored 26 points in 28 minutes, and Josh Howard added 24 points as Dallas snapped Charlotte's franchise-record five-game winning streak.

The Bobcats have never beaten the Mavericks—or even scored 100 points against them—in the eight-game series. Raymond Felton had 21 points to lead Charlotte.

Nuggets 108, Grizzlies 86

At Denver, Kenyon Martin scored 23 points, and Carmelo Anthony had 14 points and 13 rebounds to lead Denver.

Allen Iverson played with a fractured ring finger on his right hand and had just eight points on 2-for-12 shooting and didn't play in the fourth quarter.

Juan Carlos Navarro had 16 points off the bench for Memphis, which has lost 16 straight road games.

Warriors 117, Raptors 106

At Oakland, California, Monta Ellis scored 33 points, and Baron Davis had 23 points and 15 assists in the Golden State Warriors' seventh victory in eight games.

T.J. Ford scored 13 of his 23 points in the fourth quarter for the Raptors, who lost for the sixth time in eight games. Toronto played its seventh straight game without leading scorer Chris Bosh, who hopes to return from his sore right knee during the trip.

NBA BRIEFS

Wade has shockwave treatment

MIAMI (AP)—Dwyane Wade didn't wait long to begin rehabilitating his injured left knee. The Miami Heat guard and 2006 NBA finals MVP had an OssaTron procedure performed Tuesday, and will be limited to only non-contact exercise for the next 30 days. The 20-minute treatment came only one day after the Heat announced Wade would miss the remainder of the season to rest the surgically repaired joint, which has bothered him for months. An OssaTron machine provides patients with a high-powered form of shockwave therapy, and has been used to treat injuries such as plantar fasciitis and tennis elbow when other more conventional treatments fail to bring relief. Several athletes, including Heat players Alonzo Mourning and Chris Quinn, have had OssaTron treatments in the past. Wade finished the season averaging 24.5 points, currently fifth-best in the NBA.

Clippers sign ex-Heat PG Parker

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Smush Parker, released by the Miami Heat earlier this week, signed a contract with the Los Angeles Clippers on Wednesday. Terms weren't announced. Parker, a 6-foot-4 guard, played in only nine games for the Heat this season, averaging 4.8 points, 1.7 assists and 2.1 rebounds. He had been on paid leave since an incident Nov. 27 with a Miami valet parking attendant. Before signing with the Heat, Parker played two seasons for the Los Angeles Lakers, appearing in all 82 games both years, starting all but two of 164 games, and averaging 11.3 points. He has averaged 9.2 points, 2.8 assists and 2.5 rebounds in 255 career games. Parker also has played for the Cleveland Cavaliers, Detroit Pistons and Phoenix Suns. He left Fordham in 2002 after his sophomore year and wasn't chosen in the NBA draft.

Bucks' Yi out for 5th straight game

MILWAUKEE (AP)—Milwaukee Bucks forward Yi Jianlian sat out Wednesday night's game against the Utah Jazz, missing his fifth straight game with a right wrist injury. Bucks coach Larry Krystkowiak said Yi was feeling better at Wednesday morning's shootaround, but did not know when he might return to the court. Krystkowiak said Yi originally sustained the injury in January but played through it for nearly two months—a factor, the coach said, in Yi's recent drop in productivity and a sign of his character. “He wasn't a guy who was saying, ‘I'm injured, I'm this, I'm that,’” Krystkowiak said. “So I think that speaks a lot for him.” Yi's injury status is of particular concern to Chinese basketball officials, who want to make sure he's ready to play in the Olympics in August. China's biggest basketball star, Yao Ming, already is out for the season with a stress fracture in his foot but has assured Chinese fans he'll be ready for the Olympics. Injured Bucks guard Mo Williams (abdomen) and forward Desmond Mason (knee) also missed Wednesday's game and are

Caron Butler set to return from hip injury

WASHINGTON (AP)—All-Star forward Caron Butler appears set to celebrate his birthday with a return to the lineup Thursday for the Washington Wizards.

“Caron is going to be probable, so we add a little ‘Tough Juice’ to the lineup,” said coach Eddie Jordan, referring to Butler's nickname. “And we'll see how it goes.”

Butler has missed 16 straight games and 19 of the last 21 because of a hip injury. He was originally diagnosed with a strained hip flexor, but an MRI discovered a small labral tear of the left hip joint. The injury also caused Butler to miss the All-Star game.

The Wizards host LeBron James and the Cleveland Cavaliers on Thursday, which happens to be the day Butler turns 28. Jordan said Butler will start if able to play.

“I've got a nice rhythm. I've got a couple of practices under my belt. I'm not feeling any symptoms,” Butler said after Wednesday's practice. “It's a big day with my birthday. Things seem to be really flowing right now, so tomorrow would be a great game to come back.”

Butler returned to practice Monday. Other than some tightness in the groin after Tuesday's shootaround, he said he's been fine.

“If I wake up tomorrow and feel the same way, I'll definitely be on the court,” he said.

Butler's return would come none too soon for the banged-up Wizards. Gilbert Arenas (knee) and Etan Thomas (recovering from heart surgery) are practicing but still aren't ready to play.

John Daly misses pro-am time at Bay Hill

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP)—John Daly woke up Wednesday morning to read that swing coach Butch Harmon fired him. Then he got a phone call when he was at the entrance to Bay Hill letting him know he had been kicked out of the Arnold Palmer Invitational for missing the pro-am.

"Hasn't been a good day," Daly told The Associated Press. "This is the last thing I needed in my life. I feel like I let Arnold down."

5 ejected in Yankees-Rays game

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP)—Both benches cleared during the second inning of a spring training game between the New York Yankees and Tampa Bay Rays on Wednesday, leading to the ejections of two players and two coaches.

The teams, meeting four days after Yankees manager Joe Girardi complained about Tampa Bay's aggressive play after a home-plate collision that injured catcher Francisco Cervellio, had been warned before the game that the umpires would have little tolerance for any further problems.

The benches cleared after New York's Shelley Duncan slid into Rays second baseman Akinori Iwamura with the spikes raised after singling off third baseman Evan Longoria's glove and

The wild ride of golf's most unpredictable figure took another hairpin turn when Daly said he was given wrong information that caused him to miss his tee time, starting a bizarre chain reaction that knocked out two other players from the tournament.

The tour has a policy that anyone missing the pro-am is ineligible to play in the tournament.

Daly, who received a sponsor's exemption, played a Monday pro-am trying to stretch the hit into a double.

Duncan was immediately tossed. Tampa Bay's Jonny Gomes was ejected, too, after racing in from right field and barreling into Duncan as other players poured onto the field. No punches appeared to have been thrown as order was restored.

Yankee third base coach Bobby Meacham and hitting coach Kevin Long also were ejected by the umpiring crew, which met with Girardi and Tampa Bay manager Joe Maddon before the game.

New York left-hander Heath Phillips was ejected during the first inning after one of his pitches appeared to graze Longoria's shirt. The Rays had already scored two runs and three hits in the inning.

Girardi protested Phillips' ejection and both benches were warned.

at Bay Hill and said he was asked to play the Wednesday pro-am, too. He requested a morning start, then called Tuesday to find out his tee time. A woman in the tournament office told him 9:47 a.m., which instead was his starting time for the first round.

"I didn't even know that was my Thursday tee time," Daly said. "I should have looked into it. It stinks for me. I want to do anything I can for the tournament as a sponsor exemption. I wanted to meet the people I was playing with in the pro-am. I love Arnold Palmer to death. I called and talked to him and apologized.

"And the thing that upsets me is I cost Nick O'Hern and Ryuji Imada, so now I got these guys mad at me, too."

Imada and O'Hern were alternates for the pro-am, and both thought they were assigned to the afternoon group. Instead, they were the first two names called when Daly didn't show, and when neither was around, they also were disqualified from the $5.8 million event.

O'Hern lives only five minutes away at Isleworth and was furious to learn he would not be eligible.

"When I should have been on the tee, I was giving my girls breakfast," O'Hern said. "I thought common sense would have prevailed. This is a tough one to take. Unfortunately, we got caught up in John's snowball effect."

The snowball is starting to look like an avalanche.

Daly lost his full PGA Tour card two years ago and relies mainly on sponsor exemptions. In seven events this year, he has missed the cut three times and withdrew from the Bob Hope Classic, where he was spotted at several after-hour parties.

His best finish was a tie for 60th in Mexico, an opposite-field event.

The Bay Hill mix-up comes one day after Harmon, one golf's most renowned swing coaches, said he was done working with Daly because the two-time major champion appeared more interested in drinking than working on his game.

"My whole goal for him was he's got to show me golf is the most important thing in his life," Harmon said. "And the most important thing in his life is getting drunk."

Harmon said Daly's behavior last week at the PODS Championship was enough to end the short-lived relationship.

Daly spent a 2 1/2-hour rain delay during the first round in a Hooters corporate tent behind the 17th green at Innisbrook. He was 3 over, and when play resumed, he had Tampa Bay Buccaneers coach Jon Gruden caddie for him the rest of the day. After missing the cut with rounds of 77-80, Daly spent Saturday at the Hooters "Owl's Nest" next to the 17th hole, drinking beer, mingling with fans and signing autographs, including one on the back of a woman's pants.

"I just wish Butch had called me before getting slapped in the face," Daly said. "I love Butch to death. I still think he's the greatest coach out there. I just told him, 'Don't always believe what you read in the paper.' I texted him, 'All I wish you'd done is call me.' It was a shock to me."

As for his escapade at the Owl's Nest? Daly said he thought he was doing the tournament a favor by drumming up business at the raucous tent.

"I signed about a thousand hats," Daly said. "I love Hooters. I had a few beers and some chicken wings. It was Saturday. I wasn't even playing in the tournament."

Daly has been on a downward spiral since losing a playoff to Tiger Woods in 2005 at Harding Park in a World Golf Championship event. He injured his ribs last year at the Honda Classic when he tried to stop his powerful swing upon hearing the click of a fan's camera, and Daly recently said he was contemplating a lawsuit against the tournament, which gave him a sponsor's exemption.

"My life is upside-down right now," Daly said. "No matter what I do, it's wrong. I'm thinking of writing a new song. I'll call it, 'I guess it's my fault, even when it's not my fault.'"

Daly said he played Tuesday at a nearby course with Robert Gamez, who helped sort out his putting problems.

"I was looking forward to a great week," Daly said. "I've always had great success at Bay Hill. I usually don't ever miss the cut. I called Arnold, and said he feels just as bad about it. I saw him Monday and he gave me a big ol' hug and said, 'Thanks for being here.'"

Success at Bay Hill is in the eye of the Wild Thing.

Daly has played 14 times at Palmer's event, and his best finish is a tie for 10th. He has missed the cut three times, and four times shot in the 80s in the final round. One of those scores came in 1998, when Daly hit six balls in the water on the par-5 sixth and made an 18.

"I hope things get better," Phil Mickelson said. "I think we all do."

No. 25 Marquette beats Seton Hall

NEW YORK (AP)—Jerel McNeal scored 21 points and No. 25 Marquette held Seton Hall scoreless over the final five minutes of a 67-54 victory Wednesday night in the opening round of the Big East tournament.

The sixth-seeded Golden Eagles (23-8) will play third-seeded and 14th-ranked Notre Dame in the quarterfinals on Thursday night.

Both teams struggled offensively with Marquette shooting 34.4 percent (22-for-64), while Seton Hall shot 33.9 percent (20-for-59). The Pirates' plan worked well for 35 minutes as they were within 57-54 before ending the game by coming up empty on their last 10 possessions. The Golden Eagles closed with a 10-0 run.

Jamar Nutter and Eugene Harvey both had 15 points for Seton Hall (17-15), which lost its fourth straight overall and third this season to Marquette. This was the Pirates' fourth straight first-round loss in the Big East and they have lost five in a row at Madison Square Garden.

Lazar Hayward had 15 points and 10 rebounds for Marquette, while Dominic

James added 11 points. The Golden Eagles finished with a 56-37 rebound advantage, including 25-13 on the offensive end. All three of Seton Hall's big men fouled out.

Reserve guard Maurice Acker had five points but they all came in the final 5:36. He hit Marquette's only 3-pointer of the second half to give the Golden Eagles a 57-53 lead, and his driving jumper as the shot clock expired made it 62-54 with 2:38 to go.

Marquette, which struggled from the field in the previous two games with Seton Hall, finished 3-for-17 from 3-point range.

Brian Laing, the Pirates' leading scorer with a 19.0 average, finished with six points on 3-for-10 shooting. Seton Hall was 4-for-20 from behind the arc.

Giants sign QB David Carr

Eli Manning and the New York Giants have a new backup quarterback.

David Carr signed Wednesday in a move that gives the Super Bowl champions an experienced backup who like Manning was a No. 1 pick overall.

Terms were not immediately available.

"I have a lot of calluses," Carr said. "I'm like an old carpenter I've been through it. If you let that stuff affect you, you're not going to be able to do your job. One of the reasons I'm excited about coming here is they protect the quarterback well and they have playmakers on the outside."

Taken first by Houston in the 2002 draft, Carr's career has faltered in recent seasons. He was released by the Texans after the 2006 season and signed a two-year, $6 million deal last year with the Carolina Panthers.

The Panthers released him after this past season.

Carr had a 58.3 passer rating with just three touchdown passes and five interceptions after replacing the injured Jake Delhomme. Carr was eventually replaced by 44-year-old Vinny Testaverde and then undrafted rookie Matt Moore.

Carr will compete with Anthony Wright and Jared Lorenzen for the backup job to Manning, the No. 1 overall pick in 2004.

The former Fresno State product has played in 82 career games with 79 starts. He started all 16 games four times in his five seasons with the Texans, including the last three.

Careerwise, Carr has completed 1,316 of 2,206 passes for 14,026 yards, 62 touchdowns and 70 interceptions. His career passer rating is 74.4. He has been sacked 262 times, including a record 76 for 411 yards in losses as a rookie in '04.

"I think any player coming into a situation like this has to prove something,"

Carr said. "I have to work just as hard or harder than the guys there. They've been to the top. They won a Super Bowl. They don't need our help."

Joining the Giants will reunite Carr with quarterbacks coach Chris Palmer, his offensive coordinator in his first four years in Houston.

"I'm excited to meet up with Chris again," Carr said. "That's really the main reason I came up here. He has the best feel for what I'm doing. He knows what's best as far as what my mechanics should be when I throw the football."

Giants coach Tom Coughlin called Carr a talented, athletic player.

"We look forward to working with him on the fundamentals of the game," Coughlin said. "We do have some technical things to work on, but we are anxious to work with him in our program. If we can place him in a positive environment, perhaps he can reclaim some of the things that people saw to draft him in the first round." (AP)

Taylor suspect statements released

MIAMI (AP)—The alleged shooter in the murder of Washington Redskins star Sean Taylor told police he and the other suspects burned their clothes in an attempt to cover up the crime.

The statement by 17-year-old Eric Rivera Jr. and those by two other suspects were released Wednesday by state prosecutors at the request of The Associated Press and other news outlets. All three statements are heavily redacted on a judge's orders, and do not contain outright confessions to the crime.

But there are hints throughout of what happened and what led up to the Nov. 26 shooting, which authorities say took place in a botched robbery attempt at Taylor's Miami home. Taylor, an All-Pro safety for the Redskins, died the next day from heavy blood loss.

Rivera, like the other suspects from the Fort Myers area, told detectives there were five people on the trip that night, although only four are charged. All five burned their shirts, gloves and other clothes after returning home following Taylor's shooting, he said.

"And why did you guys do this?" asked Miami-Dade police Det. Juan Segovia.

"Nobody can find out who did it," Rivera replied.

Another suspect, 20-year-old Jason Scott Mitchell, said he thought about coming forward when he found out it was Taylor who had been shot. Mitchell said he was told the day after the shooting by another suspect, Charles Wardlow.

Sundquist out as Broncos' GM

DENVER (AP)—Ted Sundquist is out as the Denver Broncos' general manager.

In a brief statement Wednesday, coach Mike Shanahan said it was time for the organization to move forward and look at new directions.

"I will say I'm disappointed," Sundquist said in a phone interview. "I've been with the club for 16-plus years."

Asked if he was fired, Sundquist said, "I didn't resign."

Shanahan said he was "grateful to Ted for all his hard work and efforts on behalf of the Broncos for the past 16 years."

Other members of the Broncos' management, including director of player personnel Jim Goodman and assistant general manager Jeff Goodman will have increased roles in football operations, while Joe Ellis, chief operating officer of the Broncos, will perform operational and administrative issues.

"I started in an entry-level job here—in the front lobby answering phones and sorting mail," Sundquist said. "I love the organization and the people. I felt like every day I came into work and did my best to bring the fans of Denver a championship. I envisioned finishing my career here in Denver and being a GM here in Denver until my adult working life was over."

The Broncos limped to a 7-9 record last season, missing the playoffs for a second straight year. Since the end of the season, Denver defensive boss Jim Bates resigned and the team has released receiver Javon Walker and linebacker Ian Gold.

Sundquist didn't want to speculate whether the team's recent play had anything to do with his departure.

"You'd have to ask Mike," he said. "I don't know."

Sundquist became general manager in 2002 after 10 years in a player personnel role for the team.

Denver reached the playoffs three times under Sundquist's watch, including an appearance in the AFC championship game against Pittsburgh following the 2005 season.

The 45-year-old Sundquist supervised pro and college scouting, and was responsible for salary cap and contract analysis.

In his role as general manager, Sundquist helped Denver land free agents such as John Lynch, Daniel Graham and Travis Henry. He also made trades such as the one with the Washington Redskins to acquire Champ Bailey, and another to obtain Dre' Bly from the Detroit Lions.

Sundquist also facilitated a draft-day deal with St. Louis in 2006, allowing Denver to trade up four spots to take Vanderbilt quarterback Jay Cutler with the 11th overall pick.

"I think we took advantage of every aspect and opportunity of acquiring talent across the league, whether it was through trades or free agents," Sundquist said. "We as an organization have a great amount of respect across the league. I'd like to think I helped with that."

Goals aplenty in men's league games

jon_perez@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

The 2008 Mens's Winter Football League had its most productive day in terms of offensive output as Sunday's matches at the Oleai Sports Complex Field netted a total of 29 goals scored.

FC Arirang led the offensive onslaught with an 11-2 triumph over Ol'Aces with Yoon Won scoring the most goals for his team even exceeding the three-goal hat trick.

Yong Won had five goals, while Jae Won had a hat trick with three of his own. Teammate Jin Guan Zui added two more, while Young Jin, Jun Woo, and Sang Ho had one each.

The Independents, meanwhile, scored a come-from-behind 7-3 win over Multinational FC.

Multinational went up 2-0 in the opening minutes of the game but could not sustain their momentum and allowed the Independents to roar back into the match with Jack Thoehasaket and Jarri Noutilainen leading the attack.

Thoehasaket made four goals while Noutilainen added three. Yellow cards were also given to Lucas Knecht of the Independents and MFC's Joe Miller.

Inter defeated Onwel in a tight contest, escaping with a 4-2 decision with two goals coming from Masatoshi Otsuka.

Peter Loken and Arkie Reusora added one goal each for Inter, which now holds the top spot with a 4-1-1 win-loss-draw record.

It was a tight contest right from the opening kick as both teams battled each other for ball possession and scoring opportunity before Inter managed to sneak in two goals in the final minutes of the second half to beat their rivals.

Jessie Phonsutjit and Bunsong Srisomkhieo scored the goals for Onwel, while Inter's Dale Roberts was given a warning.

Action in the 2008 Indoor Winter Volleyball League resumed Wednesday night at the Gilbert C. Ada

Gymnasium with four teams getting the needed wins to shore up their playoff chances.

Games were called off for a week to allow officials of the Northern Mariana Islands Volleyball Association appoint a new league coordinator since former NMIVA president Jon Cramer left the island last weekend.

Fanians kept pace with league-leading Menudo after a 25-15, 25-21, 8-15 win over Home Boyz, while CH-Hammer improved its chances of grabbing a playoff seat after a 25-14, 26-24, 15-17 triumph against Ma Numel'u.

Beach Jammers, meanwhile, foiled the Islanders' chances to barge into the Top 4 of the standings after scoring a 25-16, 19-12, 15-12 decision.

The match between Ol'Aces and No Fear will be rescheduled at a later date.

Menudo, which drew a bye, remains on top of the standings with a 10-3 card followed by Fanians' 9-4 record. No Fear and Ol'Aces are tied with similar 8-4 marks while Islanders and CH-Hammer both have the same 7-7 slates.

Home Boyz (6-8) is at seventh spot, while Beach Jammers (3-10) and Ma Numel'u (1-12) round up the standings.

In the lone women's match, YoYo's swept Beach Jammers, 25-8, 25-14, 15-12 to continue its winning ways after handing previously undefeated Pikan Gaga its first loss.

YoYo's now has a 7-4 card to remain in second place behind Pikan Gaga's 9-1 slate. Seikid (4-5), Beach Jammers (3-7), and Ta Chagi (1-7) complete the standings.

YoYo's handed Pikan Gaga its first loss, snapping their opponents' nine-game winning run on Feb. 28.

YoYo's won a tightly fought first set, 25-23, and were trailing Pikan Gaga, 20-23, in the second when their opponents forfeited the match.

The 2004 XTERRA amateur champion added, "The heat and wind direction will be a factor [in Tagaman]. The bike has a lot of hills and the temperature will be rising as the day goes on."

Vance, who placed third in the 25-29 division of the 2005 ITU World Championship, said the run would be much easier.

"The run portion will be not that hard because it is all flat. The only problem I see is the tail and head winds and as far as heat is concerned I don't know how would affect all the runners. I guess you to be prepared for anything and drink lots of water to hydrate yourself."

ning four consecutive games dating back from Feb. 13 to end their season with a 7-5 mark to currently occupy third place.

The international hotel chain could slide down to fourth place depending on the outcome of Sunday's scheduled match between defending champion Aqua Resort Club (7-4) and Hafadai Beach Hotel (3-6).

Aqua Resort closes out its campaign in the HANMI Cup—which is being sponsored by Titans Chivas Life, PTI, Coca-Cola Bottlers Micronesia, and Western Sales Trading Company—against Hafadai at 3pm, while Fiesta-Grand clashes with PIC for the last time in the regular season in the 6pm contest.

Saipan World Resort and Aquarius Beach Tower will face each other in the 4:30pm second game as they try to end their respective HANMI Cup seasons on a winning note.

Kaipat's 14 markers in the fourth quarter helped PIC rally back from an eight-point deficit in the early minutes of the final canto to help secure the win. He finished with 22 points, five rebounds, and a game-high six steals to provide the needed support from Derrick Tudela's all-around game.

Tudela paced PIC with 26 points, 11 rebounds, three assists, and one steal. He had 10 points in the third quarter to keep the game close. Marino Pungilug added 12 points, six rebounds, one assist, and one steal.

Magno Abaya had a breakout game, scoring a season-high 26 points while grabbing 10 rebounds. Bernard Aquino and Mike Umali combined for 28 points and 12 rebounds.

Edmark Mendoza had 13 markers, 11 rebounds, three assists, one steal, and blocked two shots while Krisgel Arreza chipped in 10 points and grabbed four rebounds.

In the second game, Mike Olaitiman and Pete Iguel fired on all cylinders to lead Hafadai Beach Hotel to a 103-85 crushing of Aquarius Beach Tower.

Olaitiman had a season-high 36 points and issued 12 assists to tie the single-season assist record set by Elmer Esdreton last Jan. 27. He also had seven rebounds and three steals.

Iguel added 34 points, 14 rebounds, seven assists, and two steals, while Fernan Calayag finished with 14 points and 12 rebounds. Arvin Gokesan only scored four points but had a season-high 12 rebounds.

Art Trajano played like a man possessed for Aquarius, ending up with season-highs in points and rebounds with 24 and 21. His 21 rebounds broke the single-season record of 19 set by Hyatt Regency's Mendoza last Feb. 6.

Hafadai also tallied 57 rebounds to break the 52 set by Saipan World Resort against Fiesta-Grand last Jan. 6.

George Barbo added 21 for Aquarius, while Jeff Garcia net-

FALCONS

Komoro, after suffering their third straight loss on Monday night, had a bye week and will next play on March 19 where they will face the D9ers.

Patrick Blas started on the mound for the Falcons, pitching for 2 1/2 innings giving up two earned runs on no hits with two strikeouts and two walks. Greg Camacho relieved him in the bottom of the third after Kabur scored three runs.

Camacho came in when Hector Efraim was about to bat and he forced the Kabur second baseman to a sacrifice fly for the first out. Poland Masaharu reached first base safely on a throwing error by catcher Henry Iguel.

Masaharu, however, was left stranded on base when Camacho struck out Payton Sakuma and forced Roy Regual to an infield fly to end the inning.

Camacho pitched four scoreless innings after that limiting Kabur to four hits with five strikeouts and two walks.

Joshua Muna pitched the eighth for the Falcons, while Kelly Helliew came in the ninth and was tagged by Kabur with three runs on two hits with no strikeouts and two walks but could not get the final out.

Helliew, after Dennis Renguul scored on an RBI single by Leo Bobai, walked Theo Minor to put the winning run at second base. He was pulled out when Landon Martin was up to bat.

Hans Pua replaced him who got the final out when he forced Martin to an infield fly that was caught by first baseman B.J. Sablan to preserve the win.

Iguel went 2-for-5 for the Falcons scoring two runs with a double and three RBIs. His two-RBI double in the fifth highlighted the Falcons' seven-run scoring splurge.

Williams, however, prevented further damage when she struck out Stephanie Espayos for the first out then forced Anna Hem-let and Nipi Laniyo to consecutive grounders, which was fielded cleanly by her teammates to preserve the win.

The game in the boys division was being played at press time.

Today's matches will have North group's San Vicente Canaries going up against the Tata-ga of Tanapag.

Big Kahuna wants XTERRA series for Pacific

XTERRA Global Tour managing director Dave "Big Kahuna" Nicholas would like to have an XTERRA series in the Pacific involving New Zealand, Australia, Guam, and of course Saipan.

XTERRA Global Tour managing director Dave "Big Kahuna" Nicholas would like to have an XTERRA series in the Pacific involving New Zealand, Australia, Guam, and of course Saipan.

The affable head of the organization that put the extreme in the sport of triathlon said the time to promote the Pacific as an XTERRA series is now, especially with the U.S. dollar at an all-time low.

"I tried to get everyone to see this, but it has not happened. With the Euro and other currencies so strong we need to take advantage of this and get the world to come. We need to give them an excuse. By tying Guam/Saipan and then Australia and New Zealand we are giving our 30,000 athletes worldwide a grand chance to come to the Pacific and visit, compete and see new and exciting places. I am hoping for 2009 that we can get everyone to agree on a schedule and make it happen," he said in an email to the Saipan Tribune.

While Nicholas and XTERRA Global Tour support services manager Tyson Pualoa didn't stick around to watch Andrew Noble of Australia and Renata Bucher of Switzerland top last Saturday's 7th XTERRA Saipan Championship, Nicholas said the event remains and will always be the crown jewel of the Global Tour.

"It is the people and how unique the whole place is [that makes it special]. Because you live here, it becomes like the proverb 'you cannot see the forest because of the trees.' We see Saipan differently than you. As do the athletes. If you came to the World Championship at Maui, I would guarantee more people talk about someday coming to Saipan to do that race than anywhere. There is nothing tangible... Saipan is an attitude. That is why I truly think it a shame to see this event go away. It will be a big loss for the people of Saipan," he said before hoping to a plane back to Maui the Monday before XTERRA Saipan.

Nicholas and Pualoa only oversaw the laying out of the XTERRA Saipan trail after the Marianas Visitors Authority downgraded its agreement with Team Unlimited from a full-fledged $350,000 organizing gig to a $25,000 licensing agreement. That pretty much left Tagaman organizer, Taga Inc., in charge of the off-road multi-sport event this year.

Nicholas

Aside from XTERRA Global Tour's signature multi-sport races, Nicholas said he is proud to see that its trail running series has literally hit the ground running the past several years.

"Our latest growth area is in our trail running series. We have seen that event double in three years to the point where we will have races in about six different countries and now a World Championship on Oahu in December," he said.

Nicholas said the trail running series mimic the XTERRA triathlons in design and attitude, "but is just all about running."

He added: "No swim, no bike. Distance is half marathon or 13 miles (21 kilometers). But just like XTERRA the distance is not critical because Mother Nature tells you how long a trail is. You cannot just turn around on the road and head back, so the races are anywhere from 18K to 25K and some even longer," he said.

Nicholas said while XTERRA is becoming a household name in Asia and the Pacific, organizers can't help but become choosy when deciding to add a country or a locale to the XTERRA Global Tour.

"We are growing in the Pacific with strong inquiries from Korea, Thailand, and Malaysia. It could break open quickly if we find the right situations. We do not simply make an XTERRA because somebody says, 'come here.' We need confidence in the local operators that the job can be done properly," he said.

Noble, Vance gear up for Tagaman

REPORTER

Defending champion Andrew Noble of Australia says he is fit and ready for tomorrow's 19th Tagaman Triathlon, while XTERRA Saipan Championship runner-up and his expected foil Jim Vance is not sure about his chances.

Noble, who is also eyeing his second straight PIC Double crown, says he is physically and psychologically ready to challenge the grueling 2-kilometer swim, 60-km bike, and 15-km run across Saipan's flat roads and rolling hills.

The PIC Double is awarded to the participant with the best combined times of the XTERRA Saipan Championship and Saturday's Tagaman.

"I feel confident and better than last year. I feel relaxed, recharge, and just kicking back here at [Pacific Islands Club]. I hope to win on Saturday," said Noble in an interview after a short swim off PIC.

He said that he sees no problems with his fitness level on Tagaman after his XTERRA win. "I suffered no injuries in XTERRA. I just felt a bit tired last Saturday for overtraining myself and I just arrived one day before the race and got lost when I tried it."

Noble said that last week's rain made the XTERRA course more difficult and challenging. "The course was all muddy and it sticks to your tires. I was very careful when I rode my bike and at times I walked to avoid crashing. The mud really sticks to your tires and it makes it more difficult to go up hill with that kind of situation," said Noble.

"Good thing [organizers] made the start time two hours early from the previous year so it is not that hot when it comes to the bike and run portions of the race."

Aside from Vance, Noble sees last year's runner-up Masayuki Matsumaru of Chiba, Japan, and Korean Han Seok-Joo as most likely to push him to the limit on Saturday. "Jim [Vance] is a good racer in the longer distances and surely he is a threat. There is also a strong field from Japan and Korea that has just arrived."

Noble has been training everyday and tested the Tagaman course a number of times after winning XTERRA Saipan. "I've done biking, running and studied the course to prepare myself."

He said that he also aims to lower his run time this year. "I hope to break the 50-minute mark. Last year I finished the run in 51 minutes [and 19 seconds]. I hope to do better this year."

Vance, meanwhile, said he is still sizing himself up before Tagaman after suffering a minor injury with his left thigh and calf muscles while training last Tuesday. "I have not done much training after that and did not push myself hard to prepare for [tomorrow]. I hope to be ready and have a better performance."

"I did some swimming exercise while undergoing therapy with my thigh and calf [muscle]. I've done some stretching and rested it for the big day."

He said that he has expected the bike leg of the Tagaman

The Kingfishers scored a total of eight runs in the final three innings to hand Dandan its second straight loss.

The Tottot also committed nine errors in the entire game with WSR scoring twice in two of those turnovers in the fourth inning.

Pitcher Annalisa Blas went 2-for-3 with two singles, two runs, and four stolen bases for WSR. She also held Dandan to one unearned run for three innings before being replaced by Esther Williams in the bottom of the fourth.

The defending champion Falcons of Tanapag used a seven-run, fifth-inning rally to pull off a 13-7 victory against Kabur in the 3rd Annual Budweiser-Saipan Major League on Wednesday night at the Francisco M. Palacios Baseball Field.

The win was the second straight for the back-to-back title-seeking Falcons to share the top spot with the vastly improved Korean Dreams and dangerous Rock Steady, which was playing at press time.
